DESPAIR DRIVES GIRL TO DEATH

Governor Foss's Transfer of Industry Another Powerful Argument Against a Disastrous Tariff Policy

Governor Foss has issued a statement explaining a condition which prevails in our manufacturing industries throughout the country. He is about to transfer part of his large industry to Canada. In doing this he is following the example of his American competitors and is reluctantly yielding after a ten years' resistance to an imperative situation created by our tariff laws.

The condition pointed out by the Governor's statement and by his more important act will probably surprise a great many American citizens who have attached little importance to the contest which Governor Foss and which also the Boston AMERICAN and all the Hearst publications have made during recent years in behalf of reciprocity.

We have a protective tariff, as we suppose, to protect American labor, but it now works very differently. Some of the industries which we have here, which are most protected, pay the lowest wages—lower even than similar industries in Europe—and other industries whose scientific economies and skilled labor would enable them to compete in a foreign market with foreign competitors, find themselves shut out from the foreign market by foreign tariff walls built up in retaliation of our own tariff wall.

The remedy for this disastrous condition is clearly a reciprocity provision in our tariff which will allow our government to trade with the foreign nations and to reduce our tariff in exchange for reductions in the foreign tariffs, so that American-made goods may be allowed to be sold in foreign countries in return for the concession which we grant to foreign goods sold in this country.

As the Governor says, it is throwing away an opportunity when we reduce our tariff without making reciprocal trade bargains with other countries to obtain similar reductions in foreign tariffs in favor of our goods. The Governor's statement has received country-wide attention and should be studied by every thoughtful citizen. It is as follows:

For more than twelve years one of the principal Massachusetts corporations which I represent has had under consideration a plan of transferring to Canada a large portion of its work. I have personally opposed this plan and endeavored to maintain this industrial enterprise, in full, here in Massachusetts, but am now convinced that it is no longer possible to defer action on this matter.

Accordingly, I make the announcement, although I do so with sincere regret, that the B. F. Sturtevant Co. has just completed the purchase of a manufacturing plant in Gault, Ontario, and that a large part of the work which has hitherto been done at Hyde Park will now be transferred to Canada.

All over the United States the tendency among the principal manufacturing interests is toward the establishment of plants in Canada. This movement has been going on for many years, and it is estimated that from three to five hundred million dollars of American capital is now invested in these Canadian plants. The Sturtevant Co. must join the procession in order to meet the conditions of the industry, for the movement has now proceeded to a point where corporations which fail to follow are faced with serious embarrassment. American manufacturers have completely filled the American market and their production is now greatly in excess of the domestic demand. Under these conditions the expansion of their domestic plants is impossible and it is becoming necessary for them to curtail production.

If they had a reasonable outlet for their surplus products, under reciprocal trade agreements with other countries, these industries could remain at home and grow; but, under the conditions that exist, they must remove in part to those countries whose markets they desire to reach.

The Sturtevant Co. can no longer ignore this movement. The industrial situation demands that it take part. Therefore, after more than a decade of effort to render this step unnecessary, it is reluctantly obliged to accept the situation and remove to Canada a part of its work, thus curtailing production in Massachusetts.

This movement of American manufactures to Canada could be stopped and they could remain intact in this country if it were not for the absurd conditions created by our tariff legislation.

We should have with Canada, and other countries, such trade agreements as would enable us to manufacture our goods in the United States, giving employment to American workingmen, and utilizing only American capital.

But such agreements would imply a recognition of the principle of reciprocity. If we were to ship the products of American factories to Canada and to Europe without the present handicaps, we should require certain trade concessions from the governments of our customer nations, and in return for these concessions we should be expected to grant similar ones to the products of those countries.

While the McKinley tariff recognized this principle, the later Republican tariffs have mainly ignored it and substituted retaliation and trade reprisals, practically imposing a prohibitive fine upon our foreign commerce.

Four years ago, those who were then responsible for the policy of the Republican Party in Massachusetts, told me that my

5-ALARM FIRE IN ROXBURY

Three Buildings Destroyed in Sweep of Flames; Loss Is $100,000.

MANY DRIVEN FROM HOMES

Three buildings were destroyed and another was badly damaged in a spectacular five-alarm fire at Roxbury today. The damage was $100,000. Eighteen persons are homeless, and a hundred and fifty were thrown out of work.

A fireman was hit by a flying brick, an aged woman rescued, and three children were carried from their burning home. Fifty girls working in the factory, where the fire started, fled in a mad scramble down the stairs to the street, half-fainting with fright.

The fire was at the corner of Prescott, Hampden and Eustis streets. It started in the C. & C. Raincoat Company's factory in the old Guyer Hat Company Building. The smoke from the burning cloth and rubber here fell over the whole section like a pall, many being made faint by the fumes.

Nearly Trapped by Fire.

Spontaneous combustion is believed to have caused the fire. The flames sprang like rats from beneath a pile of cloth in the raincoat factory, the girl employes crowding away from the spreading fire, wide-eyed and screaming. In fifteen minutes the entire building was going. It has a frontage of seventy-five feet and is 150 feet deep, four stories high, of brick, the big bonfire sending leaping flames so high that they could be seen from Boston.

In this building are, besides the raincoat company, two other firms, the Orton Packing Company and the Ideal Machinery Company. The entire building was levelled. The Crowell Wet Wash, at No. 173 Eustis street, caught and burned. Windows in the Howard Watch factory, across the street, were broken by the heat.

Across Prescott street, two buildings were ignited. At F. W. Dodge's stable, at No. 4, which was destroyed, two horses were rescued. The double house, Nos. 6 and 8, was practically destroyed, driving out eighteen people.

At No. 6, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Rossiter and their two children live. Mrs. Rossiter and the children, Ellen and Josephine, were alone in the house, and fled without time to save any of their furniture.

At No. 6 lives Thomas Halloran, his wife and nine children. Mrs. Halloran was at work in the kitchen. Six of the children were away. The others were asleep. Mrs. Halloran carried Edward and Miles out, then returned and helped Francis to the street.

Factory Wall Tumbles.

Mrs. Mary Hoban and three children live on the upper floor here. The children, Mary, Alice and Francis, were all at home, and when they and their mother got to the street, the heat from the burning building across the way was almost unbearable.

The Prescott street wall of the factory tumbled in, sending firemen and police running. One fireman was struck and knocked down.

Mrs. Thomas Cox, an invalid, living in a house six feet away from the burning factory, was carried to the street by her children.

Mrs. Pankhurst Is Once More Arrested

Again Jailed After Auctioning Off Her Ticket of Leave.

LONDON, July 14.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and Miss Annie Kenney, who were recently released from prison because of illness induced by food and water strike, were arrested again today as they were leaving the Pavilion Music Hall in the West End, where the militant suffragettes had held a rally.

Both had made bitter speeches defying the government and calling upon their organization, the Woman's Social and Political Union, for more violence. They made mock of their prison sentences by auctioning their ticket of leave to the audience. A crowd surrounded them as Mrs. Pankhurst and Miss Kenney were being led out and the police had to protect them.

Bulgaria Denies Story of Slaughter

Czar Ferdinand, Blaming Allies, Asks for International Inquiry.

LONDON, July 14.—Bulgaria is willing to go on trial before a world tribunal to prove false stories of excesses of Bulgarian soldiers in Macedonia. Czar Ferdinand personally telegraphed a statement to the London News today, denying that Bulgarian troops had tortured and massacred Greeks in Macedonia.

"On the contrary," said Ferdinand, "Greek and Servian troops are the ones guilty of outrages on the people. They have slaughtered those who sympathized with the Bulgarians and have circulated false stories. The people of Adrianople, which is under Bulgarian sway, enjoy entire freedom. The Bulgarian government is ready for any international inquiry, for we can prove that our troops have acted with as much humanity as war would permit."

Blaze on Platform of "L" at State Street

An excited citizen rang in an alarm from Box No. 38 today for a slight blaze, caused by a lighted cigarette, on the platform of State street elevated station. The fire was easily extinguished by the employes of the elevated.

Mrs. Cornwallis West Wants Former Name

Queen, Who Opposes Divorce, Will Be Angry, It Is Said.

LONDON, July 14.—Mrs. George Cornwallis West, who won her divorce case against her husband, let it be known today that she will ask the court to allow her to resume her former name—Lady Randolph Churchill—the name of her first husband, who died.

The announcement follows action taken by the well known society leader, who is the daughter of the late Leonard Jerome of New York, when she recently issued her husband for the restitution of her conjugal rights, charging desertion. A decree was awarded Mrs. Cornwallis-West without contest.

Much speculation has been caused by the announcement, for only recently Queen Mary declared she was opposed to divorces. Society fears the Queen will be angry by Mrs. Cornwallis West's step. A break between the titled English authoress and Her Majesty seems certain if Mrs. Cornwallis West carries out her intention of getting an absolute decree of divorce.

Barnstable Man Stabbed by Brother

BARNSTABLE, July 14.—Sheriff Henry M. Percival and posse are on the hunt for Bangs Howes, who, it is charged, in a maniacal fit, cut and severely wounded his brother, Marcus Hall Howes, the postmaster here, early yesterday. The story of the stabbing did not leak out until today. Sheriff Percival has sent a warning to police of surrounding towns to watch for Howes, who may be dangerous.

Roosevelt Plans 150-Mile Ride

WILLIAMS, Ariz., July 14.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt will rest at Grand Canyon three or four days before starting on a 150-mile ride. He was met here by Nicholas Roosevelt, his nephew, who had been arranging the trip. The ex-President plans to cross the canyon by muleback, hunt bear and mountain lions for a week or two and then ride to Gallup.

IPSWICH STRIKERS EVICTED

Women Taunt Deputy Sheriffs as Furniture Is Dragged to the Street.

OLD TENANTS FORCED OUT

IPSWICH, July 14.—The families of fifteen strikers were evicted from their homes today by orders of the Ipswich Hosiery Mills Company.

The families protested, saying they had no place to move. They were told that the company required the mill tenements for the families of new operatives.

Deputy Sheriffs Briggs of Newburyport, and Raymond of Haverhill, conducted the evictions. They had a strenuous time of it, as most of the families let them move the furnishings to the street, stoves, beds and all. They were hot and ragged before they were at it an hour.

What surprised the deputies most was the passiveness with which many of the evicted families accepted the edict. The Greek and Polish mothers, surrounded by children, stood around and peered at the men who were dismantling their homes.

No. 14 Estes street was the first tenement tackled.

"We have come to move you out," said one of the deputies to the surprised mother of six.

In broken English she replied that she couldn't move as there was no other place to go. She wanted them to wait until her husband returned from work.

"No! No!" said the evictor. "If you have no place to go we must put your things into the road."

"All right," said the woman, and out went her chairs, tables, kitchen utensils, beds and all.

Laura Till, Queen of Marionettes, Dead

Mrs. Laura Alice Till, queen of marionette performers in the United States, died today at her home, No. 12 Salem street, Melrose, at the age of sixty years. She was the widow of John Till, a country-wide marionette producer, who died some years ago. Mrs. Till was born in Gretna Green, Scotland, and for two generations delighted grown folks as well as little folks with marionette productions. Death resulted after two shocks from cerebral hemorrhage.

Speeding Auto Hits Boy at Haverhill

HAVERHILL, July 14.—The police are searching today for an automobilist —name not known—who ran down Donald Laflin, sixteen, of Bradford, last evening. The boy was found unconscious on Salem street by Matthew J. Doyle of Lawrence, who was going by in his machine.

ONLY CLEW IS HOTEL SIGNATURE

TRY TO UNRAVEL MYSTERY

The Boston police today sent to New York a tracing of the register signature of the Hotel Bellevue suicide, the woman who leaped nine stories to a stone-paved areaway.

The signature is to be used in an effort to identify the woman. The police lay the greatest importance on this identification, for even though the woman is obviously a suicide there is the deepest mystery about her death.

The signature, experts say, is probably not an assumed name. It is believed to be "Mrs. Struber, New York," although the name may be "Straber" or even "Stroeber." The woman, the hotel official say, was German, and these names are all Germans.

Their theory of the cause for the woman's suicide is this:

She came there to meet a man —either her husband or some other. When he did not come, in despair she chose the open window.

Here are the facts which point to the truth of this hypothesis:

The Police Theory.

1—The woman evidently came to the hotel by appointment.

2—She avoided seeing anyone, even employes of the hotel.

3—She stayed closely in her room, but telephoned to the desk several times to ask if there had been any inquiries for her.

4—After she had been at the hotel four days she became uneasy.

5—Her uneasiness increased, and Saturday night she was pale and haggard.

The police believe that she despaired of seeing the man whom she expected to meet at the hotel, and that she killed herself at last rather than go home and face her husband or her family.

Here is the official description of the woman, as sent out by the police:

Twenty-four years old.
Five feet two inches tall.
One hundred and twenty pounds weight.
Complexion dark.

RAILROAD MANAGERS AGREE TO ARBITRATE.

NEW YORK, July 14.—The railway managers today notified the representatives of the conductors and trainmen's union that they would agree to arbitration under the terms of the proposed Newland amendment, increasing the arbitrators to six. As the amendment will probably be passed this makes impossible the strikes of 80,000 railroad men.

SOMERVILLE ICE DEALERS FINED $10

The first arrest in the short-weight ice crusade in Somerville was reported today, when Sealer of Weights and Measures Benjamin Abbott placed under arrest, William Duffy of No. 48 Trull street, a driver for the Cambridge Ice Company.

Abbott claims that Duffy, on July 3 delivered to the City Home, 206 pounds of ice, and marked on the register that it was 250 pounds. Abbott weighed the ice immediately after the driver had gone and his arrest followed.

In the Somerville Court today Duffy was fined $10. He paid.

Hold Boston Girl on Pickpocket Charge

Mary Hill, twenty-five, of Boston, was sent to the Sacrborn prison for women today by Judge Bruce in the Malden Court on the charge of picking pockets. The girl was charged with robbing James Velmure, a Malden barber, of his roll, July 5. She promptly furnished $1,000 in bonds for the Grand Jury in September.

Had straw suitcase, and imitation Panama hat, with two suits of clothes.

Had Little Jewelry.

The woman had little jewelry—a small gold ring set with small diamonds. Everything she had or wore was commonplace, like that worn by thousands of others and indistinctive.

The last person to see her alive was Joseph George, a bell boy, who took a bottle of beer to the room at 8:30 Saturday night. He said she seemed more downcast than ever then.

"She paid for the beer and gave me a 25-cent tip," he said, "but did not even respond when I thanked her."

An attendant at the Bellevue said:

All the bell boys and chamber maids were puzzled by the way she acted. She came to the hotel in a taxicab and walked in alone, carrying her suit case.

Once she got to her room the woman gave notice she desired all her meals served there. To my knowledge she did not leave her room, although a chambermaid has told me she thinks that the woman did go out on one occasion.

Barred Maid from Room.

Our attention was attracted to her when she expressed a desire that the chambermaid should not enter her room. She explained she would personally attend to its care. From the first it was plain that the woman wished to be left alone.

Many times when attaches went to the room she was in bed. This was often the case in the middle of the day. But once during my visits to the apartment was the women out of bed.

FATHER DROPS CASE AGAINST LILLIAN ROUNDS

At her father's request, the charge against Lillian Rounds of Cambridge, that she was a stubborn child, today was dismissed.

Miss Rounds was the heroine of a duel between Herbert Larner, her sweetheart, and William J. Rounds, Jr., her brother, as a result of which both are under indictment. A knife was used in the fight.

The girl disappeared for a time. Her father, former Senator William J. Rounds of Cambridge, secured her arrest and charged her with being a stubborn child.

Today he and his daughte appeared at the courthouse and conferred with Probation Officer Lucy Hotchkiss, and through her intercession with the court, the case was dismissed, and thus the famous long-drawn out case ends.

Mr. Rounds has said that his daughter and young Larner may be "married any time they say so—if only they will come out in the open about it."

2 Hurt in Upset of Auto in Marlboro

MARLBORO, July 14.—Newton Jonah, sixty, of No. 7 Walnut street, Dedham, was at the Marlboro Hospital in an unconscious condition today, as the result of an automobile accident. Two tires on his car burst, causing the machine to skid. It went down an embankment, turned turtle and threw both Jonah and his companion, Charles Macomber, also of Dedham, through the windshield. Macomber was only slightly hurt.

JAIL SENTENCE FOR DRUNKEN AUTO DRIVER

Joseph E. L. Miller, a prominent Weymouth quarryman, well known in South Shore business circles, was today sentenced by Judge Pratt in the Hingham District Court to thirty days in the Plymouth jail on a charge of operating his automobile while under the influence of liquor.

Miller at first accepted his sentence, and said he would not appeal. His $200 cash bond was returned to him, and Deputy Sheriff Charles Spring of Hingham took Miller to his Weymouth home.

He found there a telegram ordering a quantity of stone for some work in Newport, R. I. His wife urged him to appeal and because he could find no one to take the contract, Miller took her advice, returned to the court house, entered an appeal and was held for the October term of court in $500.

Friends Furnish Bail.

Friends furnished bond and he was released.

Miller is the second man within four days to be sentenced in the same court, by the same judge, on a similar charge. In passing sentence on Miller Judge Pratt emphatically declared that he will impose jail sentences on all motorists found guilty of driving their machines while intoxicated.

Miller was arrested in Hull two weeks ago by Chief of Police Reynolds. His case was continued several times. The police declared Miller was drunk as he sat in his automobile, and that they had taken his car away from him.

Miller today pleaded not guilty. After hearing all the evidence, Judge Pratt said:

I shall sentence him to the Plymouth County Jail for thirty days.

This complaint is reprehensible. I will not impose a fine in a case of this sort. I have made up my mind that when men are found guilty of these charges, I shall impose a jail sentence and not a fine.

Other Defendant Appealed.

Judge Pratt last Friday sentenced Frederick Sylvester, a prominent Hull resident, to three months in the Plymouth Jail on a charge of operating his automobile while under the influence of liquor. Chief Reynolds was the complainant in this case. Sylvester appealed.

Miller is about forty years old and lives in East Weymouth. He is the owner of a semi-fluced granite quarry and has furnished stone for many churches and other buildings in New England. His quarry turned out a large part of the stone used in the construction of New York's subway system.

Wilson Gained 12 Pounds on Vacation

President Back at Desk, Feeling Fine, He Says.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Tanned by his week in the New Hampshire sun, President Wilson returned to Washington at 9:35 a. m. today, feeling greatly benefited by his vacation.

"I had a splendid time in Cornish," said the President, "and I certainly did enjoy it. Dr. Grayson assured me that the motoring and golf did me a great deal of good physically, and I feel much better than when I left Washington."

The President gained twelve pounds during his week away from Washington and Dr. Grayson attributes a large part of this to the seven hundred miles which his patient covered in an automobile.

Japan Gives Cup to Cruiser Charleston

WASHINGTON, July 14.—While diplomatic Washington is conjecturing over correspondence between the United States and Japan, the two countries, by alternately extending courtesies, are keeping the curious in the dark as to the real situation regarding the California controversy. During the past few weeks the United States has officially welcomed eminent Japanese visitors. Now the Japanese government has presented the United States cruiser Charleston with a silver loving cup for its aid to Tokio during the flood of 1910.

Scholarships for Roxbury Graduates

Joseph M. Ryan, of No. 59 Smith street, Roxbury, and John P. Walsh, of No. 250 Grove street, Roxbury, graduates of the School of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, that district, were today awarded high school scholarship at Boston College by the Rev. John J. Geoghegan, S. J., prefect of studies. The young men won the scholarship at an examination of parochial school graduates last month. There were 112 competitors.

Fine Rev. P. H. Drake Socialist Minister

Before Associate Justice Pratt in the East Norfolk County District Court at Quincy today, Rev. Paul H. Drake, known as the "Socialist minister," was fined $15 for violating a city ordinance by obstructing traffic during a Socialist meeting in Quincy square last night. He appealed and $100 bail was furnished by Gustav B. Bates and Fred Lord, both of Quincy.

COL. MULHALL RESUMES HIS LOBBY STORY

WASHINGTON, July 14.—The Senate lobby inquiry committee today further examined Martin M. Mulhall of Baltimore, reading into the record letters and telegrams concerning the National Association of Manufacturers.

The National Association of Manufacturers was interested, said Mulhall, in defeating George A. Pearre, former representative from the Sixth Maryland district, who was the author of a radical anti-injunction bill. Mulhall frequently went into Pearre's district to organize opposition to him. Robert Lowndes, son of a former Governor of Maryland, was a candidate against Pearre when the latter was being fought by the National Association of Manufacturers.

A report from Mulhall to Marshall Cushing, secretary of the Manufacturers' Association, dated April 12, 1906, stated that Mulhall had learned that Samuel Gompers had told President Roosevelt that if labor was not given greater attention by Congress the American Federation of Labor would attempt to elect independent labor congressman.

Mulhall said he usually met Cushing in Washington in a small room just off the barroom of the New Willard Hotel and concealed from the gaze of persons there by a curtain.

Joseph Walker in Automobile Crash

Mrs. George Stevens of Prides Crossing, and Joseph Walker of Brookline, former Speaker of the House of Representatives, and a party of friends narrowly escaped death in a collision between two automobiles at the entrance to Mrs. Stevens' estate at Prides Crossing. Mrs. Stevens was emerging from the driveway of her estate in an automobile as ex-Speaker Walker and his friends approached. Walker attempted to bring his car to a stop. An accident was unavoidable. Both cars crashed together. Although both cars were damaged, the occupants escaped with a shaking up.

DODGE BLAME OVER CHILDREN IN POLICE COURT

Everybody in and around Somerville who had a hand in the carting of six little children to the police station in a patrol wagon—because a complaint had been made against their father—showed a disposition today to dodge the responsibility.

Reporters for the AMERICAN tried in vain to find an official who would stand up before the storm of public protest.

"I made the complaint to the Somerville police," admitted Agent W. Earl Pittinger of the Society for the PREVENTION of Cruelty to Children, "but of course, it wasn't I who selected the patrol wagon for a conveyance. That is up to the police. See Captain Richard Perry."

"The police," said Mayor Charles A. Burns, "have no conveyance except the patrol wagon, and of course they had to use that. If they had gone out for only one child, they might have gone by trolley car, but they were after six or seven. Still, it seems to me the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children might arrange these things better."

Much of Somerville's indignation springs from the fact that three of the children were taken from their classes in public schools. The patrol wagon clanged right up to the schoolhouses, crowds gathered and the little ones were taken away like so many thieves or pickpockets.

Employer's Statement.

The "solid ivory" aspects of the case began to look even uglier, today, when acquaintances of the father came forward to say a word for him. Reporters found the man's employer. This employer is Charles F. Hodsdon, of the Hodsdon stables in Hovey avenue at North Cambridge. Said Mr. Hodsdon:

"Tom O'Neil is a good, faithful workman. I know he loves his children and takes good care of them. To my personal knowledge his eldest daughter, the housekeeper, calls here every Saturday night and takes his pay envelope, untouched. I consider O'Neil a faithful man. I have had ample opportunity to judge him."

The children in the story are Abbie, eighteen, Thomas, fifteen, Charles, thirteen, May, eleven, John, eight, Catherine, six, Agnes, four, and Lillian, two. The complaint sworn out by Agent Pittinger averred that:

"By reason of the neglect, etc., of their father they are growing up WITHOUT EDUCATION and salutary control, and in circumstances exposing them to lead idle and dissolute lives."

The mother of the family had since August of 1912 been a patient at the Somerville tuberculosis camp on Broadway, at Clarendon Hill. Abbie had been the housekeeper during her absence. The complaint alleged that the other children were growing up WITHOUT EDUCATION, but Charles and May O'Neil were taken from the Carr school and John from the Durrell school. It is a fact that Catherine, six, Agnes, four, and Lillian, two, were not at school. Policemen and patrol wagon found them at home.

The father of the young people is a carriage washer. His work is done at night. He believes the complaint of the Society sprang from the fact that he was seen about in the afternoon, apparently idle. This is O'Neil's statement:

"For myself I shall answer when the time comes, the 'case' against me having been continued until August 5. But my children have been treated outrageously. As long as they live they are not likely to forget the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

"One of my boys was helping his teacher to arrange the schoolroom plants when the patrol wagon came for him. The girl had come to school as neat and clean as any little miss on the street. She was humiliated in the same way. How would you feel if it was done to your children?

"I come to work at 5 o'clock every afternoon. I am done at 6 in the morning. Every Saturday night Abbie comes to me at the stable and takes my money. I like night work because it gives me an opportunity to work at gardening in the day time. There have been weeks when, in this way, I have made $22 or $23.

"Tom, my eldest lad, had been making $6 a week and giving Abbie $5 of it, so that, while we had few luxuries, we were 'getting along.' The police took Tom out of bed at 5 in the morning. They put him in a cell.

"I was in the house the day the Society agent came to look at it. He presented a card. He said a complaint had been lodged against me, for 'neglecting' my children.

"'And there's a fine sample of it, too,' said he, indicating the two-year-old who was clinging to my trousers.

"The little girl was clad in almost nothing, because it was an exceedingly hot day in the house. She hadn't been feeling very well. Light clothing saved her some annoyance from the heat. I told the man the children had plenty to wear and enough to eat.

"When I wasn't at home, the next day, they came and took them away from me. When Abbie remonstrated, a Somerville policeman told her to shut her mouth or she'd go along with the young ones.

The case has created a tremendous sensation among parts throughout Greater Boston. On all sides there is a demand for a thorough investigation and a public apology by the responsible heads of the rich and responsible Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. In Somerville, today, there was some talk of a mass meeting of protest.

Daniels' Order is Overruled by Wife

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Josephus Daniels, Jr., will not get the historic gavel presented to his father, the Secretary of the Navy, at the Perry Centennial celebration at Erie. Mrs. Daniels has decided the gavel will go to Worth Bagley Daniels, second son of the Secretary, as a reminder of the deeds of his uncle, the late Ensign Worth Bagley, after whom young Daniels is named.

11 Killed as Trains Hit at Los Angeles

Injured Number 200, Many of Them Being Women.

LOS ANGELES, July 14.—An investigation was begun today into the cause of the collision in which eleven persons were killed and 200—many of them women—injured when a Pacific electric outward-cities train ran into another electric interurban at Vineyard Station, a junction on the outskirts of this city.

Both trains were inbound from Venice, a beach town, sixteen miles from Los Angeles.

A relief train was rushed to Vineyard Station to convey the injured to hospitals. A score of doctors and trained nurses went on the relief coaches, and their prompt presence saved the lives of many.

The wrecked coaches were filled with men, women and children, homeward bound from the seashore after a day's pleasure. The dead are:

Jacob Barmus, Edward Murray, William Taylor, Murrill Evans, Los Angeles; Clifford Alley, San Francisco; Edna T. Alter, secretary Association of Charities, Pasadena; Veronica Mihl, telephone operator, Los Angeles; two unidentified men, one unidentified woman.

Mary Walker Aids Penniless Countess

Befriends Old Friend She Discovered in Vermont.

RUTLAND, Vt., July 14.—When Dr. Mary Walker, pioneer worker for woman's rights, leaves tomorrow for Oswego, N. Y., after being royally entertained on her first visit to Vermont, she will take with her the Countess Nicholas, once a celebrity, and her friend since they were nurses together in the Union Army during the Civil War.

Penniless, although she has devoted a fortune to charity, and ill, the Countess will be placed in a sanitarium by the noted reformer, who, attired in her mannish costume, attracted much attention at the various receptions tendered her here. Dr. Walker believes the Countess will recover her health.

Countess Nicholas, who has lived here about six years, has outlived the notoriety which was hers when her story graced the front page of the leading newspapers.

Debs Takes Girl Outcast in Home

Says Friends Must Greet Her as One of His Children.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., July 14.—Eugene Debs, the Socialist leader, has taken a girl outcast into his home from the city jail. He says she must be received by his friends as "one of his children."

The girl is Helen Cox, daughter of a Methodist minister. She eloped, was divorced, and had been warned by the police to keep off the streets or go to the red light district. Debs said:

"Do the police mean to get recruits for the red light district? If that is the police policy toward women, then to be consitent the police should compel immoral men who stand on the streets to stay in the red light district."

Bryan Must Lecture to Eke Out Salary

Declares Government Wages Too Small to Live On.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., July 14.—Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan, in a speech at Hendersonville, near here, declared that he was forced to turn to the lecture platform because the government does not pay him enough of a salary to live on.

"I find it necessary," he said, "to lecture, in order to supplement the salary which I receive from the government, the salary not being sufficient to cover my expenses. As I have lectured for eighteen years, this method of adding to my income is the most natural one to which to turn, and I regard it as extremely legitimate."

MARION WOLF IS HEROINE OF LAUNCH RESCUE

Friends of Miss Marion Wolf of No. 61 Wales street, Dorchester, hailed her as a heroine today after they heard the stories of her plunk told by the more than thirty men and women who were rescued from the launch Hecla as the craft was drifting dangerously near the rocks about the Graves lighthouse in Boston Harbor Sunday.

The engine had suddenly given out, the anchor failed to hold and the launch was nearly capsized by a squall. Some of the women feared the launch would be wrecked and became hysterical. Miss Wolf kept her presence of mind and coolly assured the others everything would come out all right.

Luckily the plight of the party was seen by the volunteer life-saving crew at Winthrop.

Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish gave a luncheon at Crossways, with the Spanish Minister and Senora Riano among the guests. She will give a luncheon each Sunday for the remainder of the season.

Mrs. William Payne Thompson gave her first dinner of the season, having the German Ambassador, Count Von Bernstorff, among the guests. George Bakhmeteff, the Russian Ambassador, also gave a large dinner last evening.

"Silly to Seek Praise"—John D.

CLEVELAND, July 14.—John D. Rockefeller, praising H. C. Dittmer, formerly his assistant Sunday school superintendent, said:

"It is silly for people to seek human praise. They often avoid doing much good by hunting for personal glory.

"I think a great deal more good could be done by church people if they had Mr. Dittmer's spirit. Instead of stopping Sunday school work after his term as superintendent, he went back as teacher."

Rockefeller then dropped a greenback in the contribution basket.

DISCOVER NEW WITNESSES IN LAKE MYSTERY

WILKESBARRE, Pa., July 14.—From the result of a second autopsy today and from two newly discovered witnesses, the authorities expect to secure evidence to warrant a formal charge of murder in the case of Miss Alice Crisnell, the pretty nineteen-year-old girl whose body was found floating in Harvey Lake. The two new witnesses are a young man and a girl who were rowing on Harvey Lake at midnight on the night of July 4, the hour when Alice is supposed to have been killed. They heard voices of a man and a woman raised in a quarrel upon the lonely bend on the point near where Miss Crispell's body was found.

The girl is the daughter of a wealthy family which is summering near Harvey Lake, and was with a young man on the night of July 4, whose companionship she had been forbidden to entertain.

Prosecuting Attorney John H. Bigelow is keeping constant surveillance over William Crispell, father of the dead girl. Crispell denies any knowledge of his daughter's death, but admits that he was greatly moved on the night of July 4 when he saw his daughter, with several other girls and young men, carousing in the cafe of the Oneonta Hotel.

Cavalieri to Sing Here in New Opera

Will Appear with Her Fiance, Muratore, in "Francesca da Rimini."

Lina Cavalieri and the famous tenor, Lucien Muratore, to whom she was recently reported engaged, will have the principal roles in "Francesca da Rimini," to be produced at the Boston Opera House, according to a cable from Paris today. The production will be the first hearing anywhere of the new opera, which is by Gabriele d'Annunzio, the famous Italian poet and dramatist. The music is by Riccardo Zandonai.

Director Russell won the fight to produce the opera first in a keen competition with M. Gatti-Casazza of the Metropolitan Opera Company. The opera will be given probably next February.

Yankee King to Desert 30 Wives

Former Can't Supply Them with Latest English Gowns.

NEW YORK, July 14.—Archibald C. Everett, the only American King in existence, has made up his mind to renounce his throne and is coming back to New York. He is King of the savage island of Aroral, in the Gilbert group of South Sea Islands, and until 1909 was a New York curb broker.

The insistence of his wives, of whom he has thirty, for English gowns, which he describes as an expensive encroachment of civilization, and his loneliness are the prime factors in his decision. He makes his intentions known in a letter just received by Stephen D. Day of No. 169 West One Hundred and Sixth street.

The gowns, he said, were recently introduced on an accidental visit of an English trader. His wives were fascinated.

GOVERNOR FOSS TELLS WHY HE REMOVES PART OF PLANT TO CANADA

tariff belief was inconsistent with membership in that party. It was at that juncture that I endeavored to secure from the Democratic Party some recognition of reciprocity as the only reasonable basis of a tariff system.

The Massachusetts Democracy adopted my views on this question, making it a cardinal policy of three campaigns. But the Democratic majority in Congress is hesitating and faltering with the splendid opportunity; it even seems to be imperiling the little reciprocity we still offer to Canada in regard to the paper industry.

Notwithstanding the failures of both of the great parties to recognize the principle of reciprocity, it is the one fundamental doctrine which should be common to the policies of both.

However, I shall not give up hope, for it is so ridiculous to lower our tariff, as the pending bill proposes, without making provision to obtain equal concessions from foreign countries, that I am confident the sensible elements of all parties will soon see it. Personally, I intend to point it out to them upon every opportune occasion.

The policy of reciprocity was declared by the founder of the Democratic Party, Thomas Jefferson, and endorsed by the leading statesmen of the Republican Party, notably McKinley and Blaine. Notwithstanding the advice of these great leaders, the Republican policy has continued on the lines of trade prohibition and exclusion while the Democratic policy continues indifferent to the opportunity which the reduction of the tariff affords to make other countries give American goods the same advantages which we propose to give them.

Instead of inviting customers by mutually beneficial trade agreements, the Republican policy would exclude foreign trade.

Instead of making tariff concessions only to those countries which would join us in such trade agreements, the Democratic policy would tear down the protecting wall of our tariff on all sides and surrender indiscriminately to foreign competition the American market with its hundred million buyers—by far the most valuable market in the world.

In sharp distinction from both these policies, a tariff drawn upon reciprocal lines would lower our tariff wall only to those countries which will give us a quid pro quo.

Reciprocity would meet the widespread demand throughout this country for a lower tariff—and would meet that demand on sane and reasonable lines, stimulating our industries and our trade. Free trade, on the contrary, if suddenly forced on the country, would be ruinous.

How ominous and deep-seated the tariff trouble is, many people do not today realize, but in view of the real facts, it is little short of farcical that we should invite foreign countries to participate in our great Panama-Pacific Exposition and to display their products therein.

Both in France and Germany the invitations of our government to participate in this Exposition are being ridiculed by Chambers of Commerce and by leading merchants and manufacturers in general. In Germany many prominent business men are advising the government to withdraw wholly from the Exposition on the general ground that it is impossible to transact and export and import business with this country on any reasonable terms or with any assurance of fair play, and the same protest is being made emphatically in France by President Legrand of the Paris Chamber of Commerce.

It is suicidal for American manufacturing interests to ignore these handicaps to foreign trade. Canada, in particular, is one of our most valuable customer nations in theory and should be so in fact.

During the past ten years the rate of increase in population in Canada has proceeded far faster than in this country and her relative industrial power is growing faster than our own. If we cannot get this market through proper adjustment of our tariff policy, then we must go to Canada and establish ourselves there.

Mellen's Own Train Is 21-2 Hours Late

"Millionaire Express" Crawls into Pittsfield Like "Virginia Creeper."

PITTSFIELD, Mass., July 14.—The "Millionaire Express" on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad pulled in here last night two hours and thirty minutes late, with Charles S. Mellen, president of the road, a passenger.

It developed that the locomotive was an old one, and it was necessary to wait ten or fifteen minutes at each station to get up enough steam to pull the train out and carry it to the next stop.

At Great Barrington a freight engine was found with steam up, and at Mr. Mellen's order this was coupled to his train to haul it into Pittsfield.

On alighting at Stockbridge Mr. Mellen was approached by several of the multimillaire passengers who are personally acquainted with him. He was congratulated on the fine service given by this branch of the railroad system. What Mr. Mellen said is not on record.

"This is worse than the train Mark Twain called the Virginia Creeper," was one comment.

State Health Board Once More Accused

Again Called Before Legislators to Explain Additional Negligence.

Formal notice was served upon the State Board of Health today, to appear before the special legislative committee investigating the employment of women and children, at a public hearing to be held on Wednesday at 10:30 a. m. to explain alleged negligence in the enforcement of the laws relative to conditions of sanitation in factories and workshops. The notice is the result of a formal vote. This is the second time within two weeks that a special legislative investigating committee has found it necessary to summons the members of the State Board of Health before it.

The committee investigating the tuberculosis situation found that the State Board was not carrying out the law requiring the establishment of tuberculosis hospitals in all cities and in all large towns.

SMOOT PUTS IN REPUBLICAN WOOL SCHEDULE

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah, Republican wool expert of the Senate, today offered a substitute for the wool schedule in the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill. The Smoot schedule, though making a substantial increase over the Democratic wool duties, is considered lower than any previous Republican schedule presented in the Senate.

Senator Smoot divides raw wool into three classes. Class one includes wools of the Merino blood imported into the United States from Buenos Ayres, New Zealand, Egypt, Australia, Russia, Great Britain, Canada and Morocco. A duty of sixteen cents per pound, if scoured, and fifteen cents a pound, if in grease, is placed on these wools. Class two includes wools from the camel, goat, alpaca and combing wools from the pure English blood. These are made dutiable at fourteen cents a pound, scoured, and thirteen cents a pound in grease. Class three includes Donskoi, native South American, Cordova, Valparaiso, native, Smyrna, Russia camel hair, Bagdad wool and Castel Branco, which are made dutiable at seven cents per pound in their natural condition and fourteen cents per pound scoured. Carpet wool and wool used for like purposes in class three, practically is made free, through a provision for a ninety-nine per cent. drawback.

The Smoot schedule makes clothing, etc., made wholly or in part of wool dutiable at from 35 to 55 per cent. ad valorem. An additional duty of from twelve cents per pound to thirty cents per pound is placed on the wools contained in these cloths. Other wool manufacturers are made dutiable on like scales of increase over the Underwood-Simmons rate, the entire schedule to take effect November 1, 1913.

Son to Viscountess Hope of Drexels

Lady Maidstone's Second Child May Reconcile Family.

LONDON, July 14.—A son, her second, was born to Viscountess Maidstone, formerly Miss Margaret Drexel of Philadelphia, it was announced today.

The family is at Links house, West Byfleet.

The first son of Lord and Lady Maidstone was born in August, 1911, and there were predictions both here and in America that his coming would be a matter of nothing. The long standing disagreement between Anthony J. Drexel, the noted banker, and his wife. The predictions were not fulfilled. The arrival of a second child is attended by similar hopes.

DRAG HARBOR FOR BODIES OF SEVEN VICTIMS

That section of the harbor near Bass Head was dragged today by the police in the hope of recovering more bodies of the eight men who lost their lives when the sloop Alberta overturned in a gust of wind. The grappling was done from the police boat Guardian, from which a diver also worked in the search for bodies of the victims.

There were sixteen on the sloop when it capsized. Six of these were rescued. Fishermen recovered one body, that of John Holland of Charlestown.

Flags were at half mast, and all was gloom today on the Boston Tunnel docks, where some of the victims worked. An excursion of Boston & Maine clerks on the dock was planned for today, but it was postponed when the news of the harbor tragedy became known.

W. Rockefeller Regains Voice

"Hi" at Pujo Probe, Now in Three-Hour Debate.

NEW YORK, July 14.—William Rockefeller is again able to talk. Less than six months ago his voice was the subject of national debate.

Process servers there got to him after a hunt of months, but he was excused from testifying before the Pujo Congressional Committee on the ground that he could neither talk nor write, and that any excitement might cause his death. The doctor said to make him testify would be equivalent to signing his death warrant.

But Rockefeller was able to debate energetically for nearly three hours the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission on the New Haven road. He showed no signs of fatigue.

'I THOUGHT I WAS SULZER'S WIFE' MIGNON HOPKINS

Believed Self Wedded by Civil Contract, Girls Who Asks Balm Declares.

Mignon Hopkins of Philadelphia, who is suing Governor Sulzer of New York for $30,000, alleging breach of promise of marriage, believed herself for several years to be Sulzer's wife on the basis of a contract they made together, she declares today, according to a Philadelphia dispatch. Despite this, she says, she was nearly stranded with her son on a visit to her sister in Boston, a trip he had finally counselled her taking. It was then she learned, while reading a Boston newspaper, of Sulzer's marriage.

Miss Hopkins today told more of her friendship with the New York Governor.

"I will tell you something," she suddenly exclaimed, "which I have never told anybody before in my life. You will not believe it, probably, and I do not blame you, but the fact is that I thought I was actually Mr. Sulzer's wife.

"We entered into a little contract of our own that night in the Stevens Hotel in New York, and when I questioned him as to the legality of such a contract, he replied that he was a lawyer and that what we promised each other then made us man and wife absolutely, both in law and in fact.

"He asked me to keep a room permanently at the Stevens Hotel and when he was in town he would stop there. His office was close by, you see. I think the room was No. 9. There were little balconies leading out of it and I would go there and remain hours with him helping him with his political worries. He said I inspired great things in him.

"In June, 1901, we became formally engaged. He had called at my home in Brooklyn and proposed marriage to me. Everyone knew it. When I said 'yes' to him he threw his arms about me and blessed me ardently.

"Mr. Sulzer was too poor to marry me at that time, and he used to beg me to wait and tell me that fortune was coming to him. My father, Charles E. Hopkins, died on May 1, 1903. He did not like Mr. Sulzer and his heart was broken when he died. Just two weeks before he left us Mr. Sulzer came to me one night and asked me to release him from his engagement.

"When I asked why he said that he could not in honor hold me while so very poor. I released him. He went away then, but on May 20 he suddenly appeared at my home again and begged me to take him back. He said he could not live without me, and, after a lot of talk, with most of my family present, I did take him back.

Stranded in Boston.

"From that time on until 1908, when the awful news was brought to me by my sister Bessie, while we were both in Boston, that he had married a trained nurse, Mr. Sulzer and I were sweethearts, and, as I firmly believed, man and wife.

"I had gone to see him about some pension papers of father's and I had asked him not to do anything in the matter just then. I told him that Bessie was dangerously sick in Boston and that I must go to her at once, but that first I would like to fix up the pension matters.

"He didn't want me to go to Boston, but finally consented and told me to go ahead and to remain with Bessie until

MIGNON HOPKINS, who tells more of how, according to her, she was wooed and won by Governor Sulzer.

Governor Begged to Be Taken Back After Release, She Says.

he sent for me. I went to her and was with her when she noticed in a Boston paper one day early in January, 1908, that William Sulzer of New York was married.

"We could not believe that it was our William, at first. I was very nearly stranded in Boston, but I managed to get car fare and come to New York, where I learned that he had in reality married.

"I went at once to see John J. Adams, a lawyer with offices in the Broad Exchange building, and papers were drawn at once in $100,000 suit for damages and served on Mr. Sulzer.

Miss Hopkins was asked to show a few more of her letters to the Governor, and in response to this request she gave the reporter seven letters, all picked at random, from the package, which contained at least one hundred.

"Widow" Nolen to Have New Quarters

Harvard's "lady of the woods," the famous "Widow" Nolen, known far and wide as a first aid to the lame and halt in gray matter and scholastic application, is no longer homeless. Minster Hall, the home of Tutor Nolen for twenty years, is no more. Mr. Nolen, who is reputed to be a millionaire, his yearly income amounting to $50,000, has made arrangements with the Harvard Corporation, whereby he has acquired the entire four floors of "Little's Block, which is now being fitted up with studies, lodging rooms and other equipments necessary to tutoring.

8,910,000 Lemons on the Canopic

Boston May Now Have Refreshing Drinks at Lower Cost.

The White Star liner Canopic came into port today from the Mediterranian with 8,910,000 lemons stored beneath her decks. These will furnish relief to the Boston lemon market, which has felt a shortage for the past few weeks. A reduction in the price of the fruit is looked for tomorrow.

The Canopic was really a great floating fruit stand. In addition to the lemons, she carried a cargo of 32,500 marraschino cherries, 28,000 boxes of macaroni, 1,500 boxes of preserved fruit, 450 bushels of onions and other edibles. Among the 1,015 passengers were Rev. W. J. Anthony of Cincinnati and Rev. John Keating of Chicago.

SOX MUST WIN NEXT 2 GAMES TO GET SERIES

CHICAGO, Ill., July 14.—The battle of bees will continue today. As it stands now the White have the best of it, two of the three games going their way.

The Red Sox must win today and tomorrow if they are to get out of town with the majority of their games against the White Sox. The two teams broke even in a double-header on Saturday, and the Chicago Sox won, 3 to 2, yesterday. Two more games remain to be played, and if the world's champions lose one of them they will go out of town with the short end of the horn.

Hugh Bedient is the lad selected by Manager Stahl for today's encounter. Hugh got a rough welcome in his first start on this trip, but has always had a little something on the White Sox, and should give them a good run.

It looks very much as if Manager Callahan will send "Reb" Russell to the slab. Russell is the recruit who has taken the place of Ed Walsh as star of the Chicago pitching staff. He is a southpaw who has been stepping on the hill in and out of turn, pitching his own games and finishing others. He is easily the toughest man on the White Sox pitching staff, and the Red Sox will have to go some to lick him.

Young Olaf Henriksen, the utility outfielder of the Bostons, who was operated on for appendicitis on Saturday was reported improved today, and his teammates were convinced that it was now only a question of time until he would be all right again. Henriksen is at the Wesley Hospital.

HOT LINERS

Pitcher Carroll Brown of the Athletics gave fifteen bases on balls in the game against the Tigers Saturday. Just after the contest he received a telegram saying "Mother and child doing well." Then his friends knew why he was nervous.

* * *

Third Baseman Zeider of the Yankees may be out of the game for the balance of the season. Zeider was sent to a hospital in St. Louis suffering from a spiked foot which threatens to develop blood poisoning.

* * *

The magnates in the big leagues are secretly worrying over the success of the new Federal League, the new Western outlaw which is struggling for existence in St. Louis, Chicago, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Kansas City, Indianapolis and other cities.

* * *

Practically all the major league managers except Johnny Evers of the Chicago Cubs concede the National League pennant to the Giants.

* * *

Four of the five American League games yesterday were won and lost by the narrow margin of one run.

* * *

The Brooklyn Dodgers have dropped ten straight games.

* * *

The Giants have eight games to play this week. Double-headers with the Cardinals are booked for Thursday and Friday.

* * *

Manager Chance of the Yankees is said to be negotiating for the purchase of Bobby Wallace of the St. Louis Browns.

* * *

Joe Boehling of the Senators is one of the sensations of the season. He has won nine games and lost none.

Ebbets to Dedicate New Field Tomorrow

NEW YORK, July 14.—Despite the startling fact that the Superbas are slightly off their feed and losing with the greatest regularity, that misfortune will not bother Charles Ebbets dedicating his new field.

The ceremonies will take place tomorrow and to celebrate the auspicious occasion, Charles "Hercules" will have a band discourse classical selections during the mime with the Cubs. Charles is in hopes that the musical stuff will stop the losing streak.

During the ceremonies a beautiful pennant flag, donated by the National League, will be raised. Needless to add, there will be a collation later, but not at the park.

Johnny Lore Takes Count in the 11th

NEW ORLEANS, July 14.—Frankie Russell of New Orleans knocked Johnny Lore of New York through the ropes in the eleventh round of their scheduled twenty-round fight at McDonoughville yesterday, and Lore was counted out before he could get back to the ring.

Second Race for Canoe Trophy Today

NEW YORK, July 14.—The second race of a series between Ralph R. Brittain, the Canadian challenger, and Leo Friede, the American defender of the international sailing canoe trophy, will be sailed today over the course of the first contest, won by Friede on Friday. The start will be made at 3 p. m.

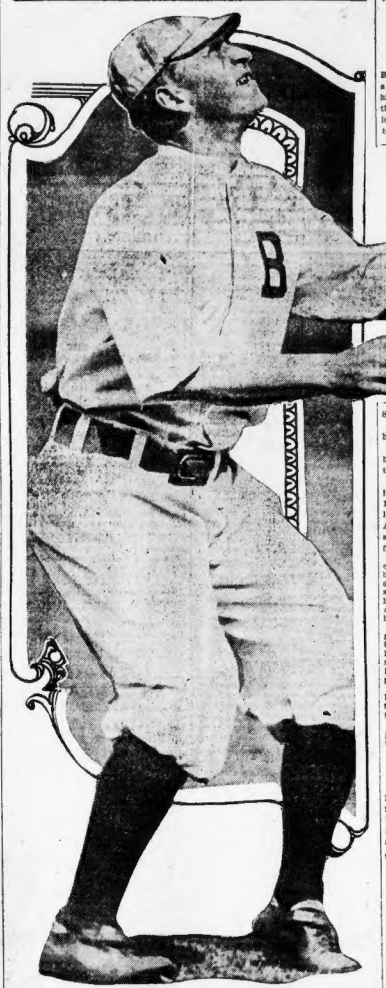
Clymer Will Be Tried Out This Week

Stallings' New Veteran Is a Fighter

OTIS CLYMER "SNAPPED" AT SOUTH END PARK



Pilgrim Manager Expects to Use Him Against Pirates or Cubs.

Otis Clymer, the new outfielder of the Boston Nationals, who will probably have a trial in the outfield or as a pinch hitter against the Pirates or his old pals, the Cubs, this week, is one of the hardest losers in Boston—a good kind of a player to have on a team. As his manager, Stallings, says:

"He won't eat if he loses a game of ball."

Stallings knows him well, as he had him in Buffalo when he was first manager there.

He sold him to the Phillies away back in 1904. From Philadelphia he went to Pittsburgh and from there to Minneapolis. He practically led the American Association for two years and as a result eight or nine clubs put in a draft for him last fall.

The Cubs got him and he played gilt-edged ball when used early this season, but Evers decided to play Mitchell, Leach and Schulte in the outfield and, having several other outfielders besides Clymer, he asked waivers on him. The Boston club refused to waive and thus secured his services.

Clymer is a left-handed batter and a good one. In most of his years as a ball player he has been "dead off" man. He is a heady, daring and wicked baserunner and insists on his right of way. If an opposing player is in his way that player is liable to get hurt.

There is not much "all-out spirit" left among the Boston Nationals. If there was, Clymer would take it out of them. He wants to win.

500 Motorcyclists in Ride to Rockies

HUTCHINSON, Kan., July 14.—Five hundred motorcycle riders will start from here today on a tour to the Rocky Mountains. The riders come from Kansas, New England, Indiana, Nebraska and the South.

HESS WILL BE SENT OUT TO TAME PIRATES

After Saturday's close tussle the Pilgrims were out strong today to take the second game of the series from the Pirates, who have been going great guns, and are out to set a season record for consecutive wins.

So far this season the Clark cohort has been rather easy picking for the Pilgrims, and Saturay's game would have gone the way of the majority of the others played by the teams had not the local defence gone to pieces behind the good pitching of Dickson.

Today's pitching selections look like ideas for the locals and "Babe" Adams for the Pirates, though Stallings may decide to use Hess, who has had a long layoff and should have recovered the form he showed early in the year.

The invaders will stand a lot of fighting at the clip they are now traveling, having at last rounded into the shape that was expected to make them pennant contenders in the ante-season dope. But on the other hand the Stallings tribe has done its greatest deeds of valor against the big fellows all the year, and with a chance to make a home-stand record unprecedented in recent years, will be stretching every point to win.

$15,000 Bid for Milwaukee Player

MILWAUKEE, July 14.—The record price—$2,500 for Marty O'Toole—paid for a ball player may be surpassed here today when Outfielder Larry Chappelle will be auctioned off in the local club's offices by Mrs. Agnes Hevanor, president of the club. The Chicago, Cincinnati and Brooklyn Nationals and Detroit, Cleveland and Chicago Americans will have agents present.

Already one club has offered $15,000, and Murphy of the Cubs has ordered his man to go as high as $20,000 if necessary. Other clubs offer players and cash.

It is reported that Comiskey of the White Sox will attend in person. Chappelle leads the league in batting.

Yacht Acushla Wins Run to Portland

PORTLAND, Me., July 14.—The fleet of the Boston Yacht Club, numbering forty-five boats, including power craft, arrived in Portland harbor yesterday in a stiff southwest gale blowing at the rate of forty miles an hour, and anchored off Peak's Island. The first boat to pass in was the Acushla II. The Acushla was closely followed by the Golden Rod. The sail down was made without a mishap.

Smith and Flynn Paired.

NEW YORK, July 14.—"Gunboat" Smith of California and "Jim" Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, have been matched to fight ten rounds at Madison Square Garden, this city, August 8.

If your feet hurt you from any cause, be sure to use the Dr. Charles Foot Relief Cushion from Dr. Scholl's. A trial will give instant comfort.

Stovall to Manage Association Outfit

TOLEDO, O., July 14.—It was reported here today that George Stovall, manager of the St. Louis American League club, will be the leader of the Toledo Mud Hens here next season.

Colonel Bob Hedges, owner of the Browns, it is said, will hand the veteran first baseman his walking papers at the end of the American League season next Fall and will scout around the country for a new manager.

Charley Somers, president of the Cleveland American League club, and also owner of the Mud Hens, has not been satisfied with the work of Topsy Hartzel, the present manager of Toledo, and will try to get Stovall's signature attached to a 1914 contract at the end of this season.

Toledo now has one of the best hitting clubs in the American Association, and with a fighting manager handling the team, the Hens should be close to the top of the league. Hartzel played with Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics before coming to Toledo two years ago.

Postpone Yacht Run.

Because of high wind the Interclub Yacht Racing Association of Massachusetts squadron run, scheduled to start from off the Squantum and Wollaston Yacht Clubs at Quincy and proceed around the harbor to City Point, was indefinitely postponed. It is probable that the run will be held in a fortnight.

CHANCE CHARGES CALLAHAN USED TRICK METHODS

ST. LOUIS, July 14.—Frank Chance is incensed at the treatment accorded him by Jimmy Callahan, manager of the Chicago White Sox. The Yankee commander intimates that he was tricked by Callahan in the trade which sent Chase to Chicago and brought Zeider and Borton to the New York team.

In talking of the latter today Chance expressed himself in forcible terms concerning Callahan and his methods.

"Callahan knew all the time," roared Chance, "that Zeider had a bad foot, but he swore to me that nothing ailed Zeider or Borton. While in Chicago the other day I learned that Callahan was aware for weeks that Zeider was troubled with his foot.

"It savors of bad sportsmanship to pull a trick like that on a club such as the Yankees—down in last place, and fighting for recognition and patronage in the biggest city."

Zeider is still at a local hospital and is coming round rapidly. Secretary Tom Davis visited the convalescent this morning and found him doing well. Surgeons operated on the bunioned toe and scraped the bone. They declared the operation was performed just in time, Zeider was in grave danger of losing not only the toe, but his whole foot, if blood poison had set in.

Another lad joined the Yankee team in Chicago, and made the trip here. The newcomer is named Hensen, and he was asked to remain by Chance when he told the Yankee leader that he was "some catcher." Midkiff has volunteered to go behind the bat, if it comes down to a pinch.

Fowler Appointed Playgrounds Head

Robert A. Fowler, the veteran Cambridge marathon runner, has been engaged by the city of Manchester, N. H., to establish a system of playgrounds.

Those who have learned of Fowler's appointment believe that he is well fitted for the position, owing to his long connection with athletic sports. Besides being one of the greatest distance runners this country has produced, Fowler has a long experience in training and conditioning boys and men for track and field sports, as well as football. For a number of years he has been one of "Pooch" Donovan's assistants at Harvard, and has learned the game from A to Z under that master.

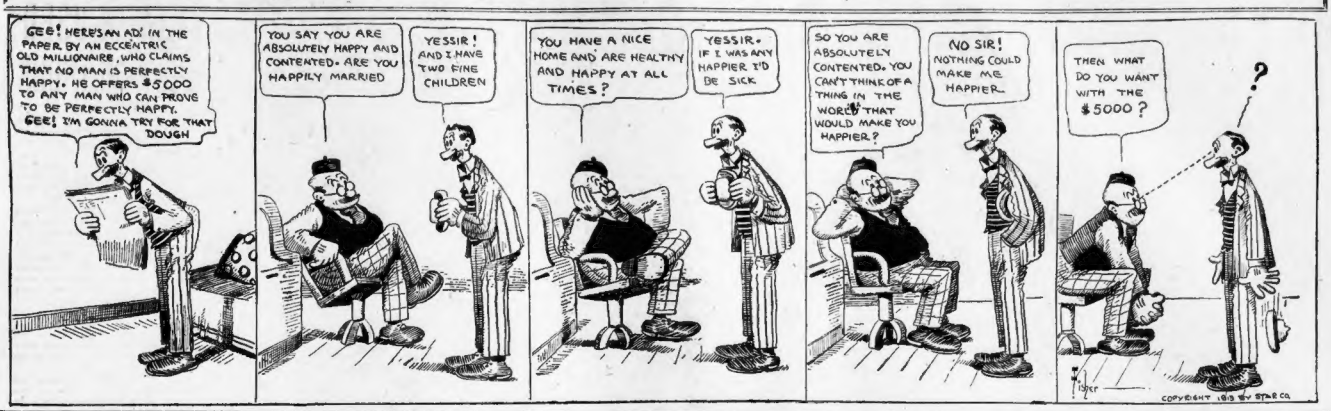
WILDING PREDICTS YANKEE VICTORY IN TENNIS PLAY

Mutt Wasn't as Happy as He Thought He Was — By "Bud" Fisher



GEE! HERE'S AN AD IN THE PAPER BY AN ECCENTRIC OLD MILLIONAIRE, WHO CLAIMS THAT NO MAN IS PERFECTLY HAPPY. HE OFFERS $5000 TO ANY MAN WHO CAN PROVE TO BE PERFECTLY HAPPY. GEE! I'M GONNA TRY FOR THAT DOUGH
YOU SAY YOU ARE ABSOLUTELY HAPPY AND CONTENTED. ARE YOU HAPPILY MARRIED
YESSIR! AND I HAVE TWO FINE CHILDREN
YOU HAVE A NICE HOME AND ARE HEALTHY AND HAPPY AT ALL TIMES?
YESSIR. IF I WAS ANY HAPPIER I'D BE SICK
SO YOU ARE ABSOLUTELY CONTENTED. YOU CAN'T THINK OF A THING IN THE WORLD THAT WOULD MAKE YOU HAPPIER?
NO SIR! NOTHING COULD MAKE ME HAPPIER.
THEN WHAT DO YOU WANT WITH THE $5000?

WILDING PICKS YANKEE TENNIS TEAM TO WIN

By ANTHONY F. WILDING.

World's Champion Lawn Tennis Player.

LONDON, July 14.—America, as represented by the Dwight F. Davis tennis cup team she has sent here, is undoubtedly living up to her deservedly great reputation. Judging by the visiting team's performances in the trial and semi-final matches of the preliminary round to determine the challenger of the English trophy holders. A winning team, stepping lightly from victory to victory, is more certain of itself, and thus is more confident than a team whose career has been checkered by close nerve-racking matches and narrow defeats.

Two other points stand out prominently and argue well for America's further success, and ultimate triumph, in the cup series. Those are excellent team work and physical perfection of the players.

Here is a team that pulls well together. Every man is keen for the success of his country, and wants to do his best in every match. The members of the invading team are in steady training, and any defeat an individual suffers can never be laid to the score of physical unfitness.

America Sure to Win.

America will oppose Canada in the finals of the preliminary round this week, and the winner will cross racquets with England's veteran possessors of the world's highest tennis honors.

America's match against the men from across the United States border is hardly worth considering, as America is certain to win.

It is in the challenge match against England that uncertainty crops up. America tackles somewhat of a tough proposition in England's hasty team, and though I do not doubt the ultimate result—that America will win—I contemplate some royal battles.

It is significant that England will rely upon old, tried players—Gore, Wilcox, Roper Barret and Parke. All except the last named are veterans.

England's choice appears to be the best available, but the old adage about "youth and brilliancy and enterprise being served" will, I think, become very apparent in the latter stages in the London doubles matches, which the series is certain to bring forth.

Williams a Coming Star.

It is my opinion that R. Norris Williams, the young American, will in time become one of the finest tennis players the world has ever seen. Williams possesses every qualification of a master exponent of the net game. At present, however he shows a tendency to be a trifle erratic, but he will overcome this fault with a few more important matches.

Maurice E. McLoughlin, America's main dependence in the forthcoming big matches, is suffering from a strained back. It is nothing serious, and a few days' rest will bring him around to his old playing brilliancy. Naturally, his back would be sore after two consecutive days of play.

Wallace F. Johnson, of Philadelphia, who deputized for McLoughlin in yesterday's exhibition matches against the Germans, showed to be an excellent second string, who is capable of performing like a champion if the occasion demanded.

Captain Harold H. Hackett of the American team is controlling his boys with judicious firmness. Hackett celebrated his birthday yesterday, and what better present could he have received than the five-match victory over the Germans?

Glover in Bout.

NEW YORK, July 14.—Mike Glover, the welterweight of Boston, and Young Hickey of this city will meet in the main bout of ten rounds at the St. Nicholas A. C. here on Wednesday night.

Few Star Boxers to Perform This Week

Gallant-Wilson and Williams-Ledoux Battles Only Bouts of Interest

By JACK CONWAY.

THERE are few boxing bouts of importance scheduled for this week. The majority of the leading glove wielders are enjoying life at the seashore or in the country and will not start training until the latter part of August or the first of September.

Almost all of the New England clubs have closed for the Summer. The Atlas A. A. has been staging some fine shows, but was unable to arrange a card for this week. A star attraction, however, will probably be put on a week from tomorrow night. Just now it looks as though the main bout would be between Eddie Murphy of South Boston and Gilbert Gallant, the rugged Chelsea lightweight.

There is not any chance of Baldwin meeting Gallant, as the Charlestown "Bearcat" is on his way to the Coast, where he will battle with Leach Cross on July 29.

A bout between Murphy and Gallant would be a better attraction than another Baldwin-Gallant contest. Joe Eagan of South Boston may also be given a date at the Arena within a few weeks.

GALLANT BATTLES WILSON.

JOHNNY GALLANT of Chelsea will swap punches with Bobby Wilson, the Canadian lightweight, in a twelve-round whirl in Chicopee this evening. Both boys are in good condition for the fray and a fast bout is expected.

Gallant expects to win, but Wilson is sure to give him a hard battle. Gallant is a swell puncher and believes that if he is able to land several right hand blows he will flatten Wilson. There is no reason why the Chelsea lightweight should not be ranked among the leading men of his weight in this section of the country. He is a regular fighter and can assimilate quite a lot of punishment. Johnny fights something like Leach Cross. He takes things easy until his opponent leaves an opening in his defence. The Chelsea kid then tries to end the bout with a single punch.

Willie Greene of South Boston will exchange punches with "Young" Sandow of Chelsea in the semi-final bout of eight rounds. Greene is under the management of Kid Block and they left for Chicopee this morning.

BRONSON NOW A MANAGER.

RAY BRONSON, the veteran Indianapolis boxer, has quit the ring and is now a big league manager. Milburn "Young" Saylor has joined his "stable." Bronson writes that he plans to take Saylor to the Pacific Coast where ring champions are made and unmade.

Saylor is well known to Boston fight "fans." He fought Battling Nelson at the Armory A. A. in the Fall of 1911 and gave the "Durable Dane" a severe lacing. Saylor afterwards signed to meet Joe Mandot in New Orleans and was knocked out. Mandot and Saylor met in a return match and Saylor's admirers claimed a victory. The Indianapolis fighter believes that he would be able to knock out Mandot in a long bout out on the Coast.

"KID WILLIAMS, the skilful Baltimore bantamweight, will battle with Charley Ledoux, the French bantamweight champion, in a twenty-round whirl at Vernon, Cal., tomorrow. Williams is naturally the favorite, as he has vanquished Eddie Campi, who in turn conquered the French boxer.

Sporting men on the coast have made Williams a 10 to 8 choice, but here in the East the Baltimore lad is a 10 to 7 and a 10 to 6 favorite. He has made a good record in all of his bouts in this section of the country, while Ledoux has not shown up so well.

The French champion is a tireless fighter and can hit fairly hard. But he is very crude and should be easy for a finished ring master like Williams.

WILLIAMS BEST BANTAM.

WILLIAMS appears to be the best bantamweight in the world. Johnny Coulon has gone back during the past few years and realizes that he would have tough sledding if he were pitted against Williams. These two men were matched for the latter part of the month, but Coulon called off the "go." He says that he is not in condition to fight and probably will not don ring togs again until late in the Fall.

GREENE REPLIES TO SIMONS.

PATSY GREENE, the Cambridge boxer, advances the information that he is eager to meet Arthur Simons in a return bout at the Atlas Club. When these boys last fought, there was no decision rendered by the referee, but all of the Boston newspapers gave the award to Simons as he had a big lead at the end of the six rounds of boxing.

MORAN IS AMBITIOUS.

FRANK MORAN of Pittsburgh steps to the front and announces in a loud tone that he is the only real white "hope." Well, what if you are Frank? We don't consider it any honor to be the king of the present crew of iron workers and lumber men, who are posing as regular heavyweight fighters.

Free Baseball Tickets for You, Fans! Root for Red Sox! Root for Braves!

If you hold one of the numbered baseball checks which the AMERICAN has distributed broadcast, it would be well for you to closely scan the sport pages of the AMERICAN'S Sporting Extra Edition today, tomorrow and every day until further notice.

Every one of the small checks which have been, and are being distributed, is numbered. The AMERICAN prints, each day, in the Sporting Extra Edition 100 duplicate numbers. If you hold a check, all you have to do is to compare the number printed on it with the list of numbers printed in the Sporting Extra Edition each day and, when a duplicate of the number you hold appears in the AMERICAN, it entitles you to a free ticket to any one of the Red Sox or Pilgrims' games—take your choice, it costs you nothing.

"Standing room only" is the watchword at Fenway Park, and at the Walpole street grounds these days, but holders of AMERICAN numbered checks do not have to stand up, as the tickets now being issued entitle the holders to a grandstand seat at any game and at any time during the season of 1913.

Remember, all you have to do is to watch the daily list in the Sporting Extra Edition of the AMERICAN, and when a duplicate of the number you hold appears, bring or send same to the AMERICAN Promotion Department, No. 5 Winthrop square, and you will receive a free ticket to any one of the Red Sox or Braves' games on the home grounds.

If YOU haven't yet obtained any of these checks, ask your newsdealer or newsboy, who will be glad to supply you.

Checks may also be obtained at AMERICAN Promotion Department.

Watch your numbers carefully. If your number does not appear today it may tomorrow. When it does, it means a free Red Sox or Pilgrim ticket for you.

Withington to Lead the Harvard A. A.

Paul Withington, if he can arrange his studies in the Harvard Medical School so that he can attend to outside business, will be the next graduate manager and treasurer of the Harvard Athletic Association, succeeding William F. Garcelon, whose term of services ends August 1. Withington has been Garcelon's assistant for three years and is well versed in the duties entailed by the office.

WILLIE RITCHIE TO FIGHT FOR BEST OFFERS

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 14.—Willie Ritchie, the lightweight champion, has declared himself as regards to his future plans. Ritchie is willing to fight any rival in the world that can make 133 pounds ringside, but Willie stipulates that he must receive a champion's share. He has no particular fondness for any club.

"I will fight in Oshkosh or China," he declared today, "or wherever they give me the largest sum. I'm in this game not for my health, for I am feeling very well. It's simply a matter of business, and when I retire I want to show something that will remind me of my championship days."

The hundreds of challenges that have been fired at him since he made Rivers quit does not worry the title holder in the slightest. He has a trip to Europe in view; a possible four weeks' engagement in vaudeville; an offer of a ten-round bout with Leach Cross in New York, and a few other flattering proposals.

He announced determinedly that he does not intend to enter the ring until Labor Day, no matter how persistently his rivals camp on his trail. He is satisfied that he is entitled to a long rest and also an opportunity to gather in a few easy shekels.

Stallings Hopes to Rise.

George Stallings predicts that the Pilgrims will finish in fifth position, his players are three and a half games behind the Dodgers. Stallings has accomplished wonders with the material in hand and already Boston fans are talking of his chances for next season.

LITTLE LOST SISTER — By Virginia Brooks

A Story of the Author's Own Experiences in Chicago's Underworld

What Has Gone Before:

The opening chapters of Virginia Brooks' striking story of the underworld, "Little Lost Sister," contain the author's explanation of methods employed by white slavers of the System to entrap young girls in cities and country towns everywhere.

Miss Brooks unfolds her adventures as a waitress in a downtown cafe, depicts herself as a clerk in a big department store and gives her experience with the girls employed at the "doll" counter. Then follows a pathetic recital of a little hungry girl's fight to earn an honest living.

One chapter is devoted to the "Cafe Sinister," which is a girl-trap, and another to the "Segregated Home." The Bexelwaum Ball is described and "Queer Fish in the Depths" and "The Scarlet Wedding Dress."

Today's instalment tells of hunting a job on the stage.

CHAPTER XI.

I Hunt a Job on the Stage

I DON'T think I shall ever forget my adventure in the role of a stage-struck girl seeking an engagement in Chicago.

It seemed for about two weeks, while the trail was fresh, that nearly every prominent manager in the United States wanted to engage me as a leading woman—at least that was the impression I gathered from the anxiety of the agents I visited to secure my services.

When I started out on this angle of my investigations I wore a natty, short-skirted blue serge suit, a pair of satin pumps and a jaunty little turban. I let my hair hang down my back in a queue so as to enhance the impression of extreme youth and in my hand I carried a silver chain reticule.

My first visit was to a theatrical bureau near Washington and Clark streets. When I entered a young man was seated at a desk talking to a girl who had preceded me. He seemed tremendously busy. When he saw me, though, he hurried the business through and nodded with an ingratiating smile, indicating that I might approach.

I told the man I was from Montauk, Ill., and that I wished to go on the stage. He glanced over me from head to foot in an appraising sort of fashion and then grinned.

"What line?" he inquired, tapping the desk with his penholder.

"Vaudeville or light opera," I ventured. "I'd like a part if I can get it; I don't want to go in the chorus."

"Any experience?" asked the young man in dulcet tones.

"Some," I answered. "I can dance well and know music, too."

"Well," he reflected, "I have several places open in outside vaudeville houses. Of course, a girl's got to be wise to get along in the business nowadays."

"You mean well educated?" I asked.

"Oh, wised up, you know—not too high-toned to get along with her friends," he said.

Depends on Your Ankles

"Do you think I can make good?" I coaxed.

"That"—and he favored me with another X-ray inventory—"that depends on your ankles, etc., my dear."

I thought the young man was sufficiently friendly and so decided to go away, leaving my phone number, because he said he would call me up as soon as he found the job I wanted, which, he said, might be any minute.

Just a brief digression. The man I am talking about now is in a prominent way of business in a popular profession, and anybody that has authority to go into the case can have his real name and the dates and circumstances involved. I have rather voluminous reports on all of these matters.

To resume: As I left Mr. Blank's office he called out to me that I must be ready for a tryout at any time of the day or night, because theatrical managers had to provide for emergencies, and people wanting good engagements had to be prepared to submit to trifling inconveniences.

Outside in the hallway I paused to get my breath. In all my life I had never encountered any one so frankly analytical of my personal endowments and attractions as Mr. Blank had proved.

While I was standing there I heard the door open between Mr. Blank's room and the next office, where a man that writes songs holds forth. The conversation was so loud that I couldn't help hearing it.

"A peach!" cried Mr. Blank. I knew that voice.

"Some class!" replied the other man. Him I have never seen.

Of course they meant me, but since I had purposely caparisoned myself like a flag lily to get that theatrical job and was ashamed to go on the street because of my short skirt, the opinions of Blank & Co. did not turn my head. I crept quietly down the stairway instead of waiting for the elevator.

Telephones at Midnight

Somehow I had no taste for further exploration that day. I went home. Mother gave me a head massage and I had partially regained my poise by dinner time. We had guests for dinner and they stayed rather late. It was nearly twelve when the last of them left. A few minutes after that the telephone rang. I answered the bell. Mr. Blank was talking.

"Hello!" he called. "Is this Miss Montigny?"

"Yes," I answered, as softly as possible. "This is Cecile—who is speaking, please?"

"Say," trilled the other end, "this is Blank—d'you get me?"

"You're the theatrical gentleman?" I whispered.

"Right-o, kid," he laughed. "Say, I've hooked a swell job for you in stock. It's a road job playing rep. I've got to come over and talk it with you."

"But I live away over on the North Side," I cooed. "It's past midnight and I couldn't think of asking you to call at this time of night."

"Oh, that's all right," he rattled on, "it won't take me many minutes. What's the address?"

"But I live in a boarding house," I told him. "If I asked you to my room at this time of night some one would be sure to criticise me."

"What you want to do is to get a job before you get worried about the critics," he chuckled. "I've got the swellest job in the business waiting on the stocks for you, but we've got to close it tonight."

That dig about the critics nonplussed me for an instant. Mr. Blank was a logician.

Persists in His Endeavor

"The best I can do is to come down in the morning and talk it over with you," I pleaded—"will not that do?"

"Oh, well, all right," snapped Mr. Blank, and I heard him hang up the receiver.

I was fixing my hair for the night when the telephone rang again. I answered it.

"Hello!" said a thick voice—"this is Blank."

"Why, Mr. Blank," I interrupted, indignantly, "do you know what time it is?"

"Time?" he gurgled. "What's time to do with us; time was made for slaves."

"White slaves!" I let slip, inadvertently.

"What?" growled the man.

"Oh," I said, "I've got to go to bed; it's after 1 o'clock."

"Wait a minute," urged Mr. Blank, "Say, kid, get on your glad rags and come on out—make a sneak for it. I'm waiting down on the corner."

"Why, there's no place we can talk at this time of night," I remonstrated—"Why can't you wait until morning?"

"I'll tell you when I see you," he insisted. "Come on down—make a quick change."

"Mr. Blank," I laughed.

"Yes, sweetheart," drooled Mr. Blank.

"Good night!"

"——," snarled the thick voice as I cut off the connection.

A few minutes later the phone began ringing again, so I pulled the plugs out of the receiver and put the useful little instrument out of use for that night. Also I slept the sleep of the just.

Agencies Afraid of the Wire

Now that is one side of the screen. Any girl with slight experience and some personal attractiveness is certain to be treated just as I was when she tries to get on the theatrical boards through her own personal unaided endeavor.

Let us see some of the other angles of this everlasting girl hunt as it is conducted in the modern city of Chicago—the city wherein "vice has been abolished."

I decided to find out about the employment agencies. You will recall that I told you of one little experience I had with them in a previous chapter.

Dressing myself in a flashy suit, topped off with a hat that resembled an ostrich farm, also wearing a wig to conceal my own dark hair, I believe I succeeded in losing whatever external evidence of respectability I ever possessed.

First I called up four or five employment agencies (I have not forgotten their addresses), and in each case something like this conversation followed:

"Hello! This is Miss Montigny."

Generally there was a man on the other end of the line.

"Yes—what can we do for you."

"I am looking for some girls to work in a hotel over a saloon. You know what I mean, dearie?"

"Yes, I know, but it's against the law for us to furnish them, and we don't dare do business over the phone."

"Well, never mind," I admonished. "Look 'em up and I'll come down."

With another agency on the line I had better luck. The man agreed to get the girls and have them ready for me to look over right away, but he would not make a deal as to price by telephone.

"Say!" he shouted, as I was about to hang up—"Do you want squabs or broads?"

Get a "Bunch of New Ones"

"Oh, little ones," I giggled. "Don't want any old ladies, you know—I ain't running a home for the aged."

That callous bit of repartee seemed to make me very popular with the man on the phone. He promised that he would get me a "bunch of new ones."

I boarded a street car and was soon in the office of this accommodating personage. He was a short, thick set man with shiny, strong teeth. His eyes were long and narrow. He may have been a foreigner, but he spoke good English. His hair was jet black and he wore diamonds on two fingers.

"I'm Miss Montigny," I told him. "You called about some furniture?" he inquired.

"Yes," I said. "What luck have you had?"

"Well," he croaked, "we've got plenty of second-hand stuff all the time, but when you want it right out of the factory, it's not so easy all the time. What kind of a place did you say it was?"

"Hotel and saloon," I smiled. "There'll be a bit in it for you."

"There are three or four squabs down near where I stay now," he put in. "They're looking for a chance, I know. Of course, I can't go to 'em direct, but I'll find out about 'em before night. What do I get?"

I named a sum that I thought would attract him. It did. His eyes became narrower and longer than ever and his lips moved as if he were eating candy. He was sensing blood money.

Within four hours I was promised eight young girls to come to that visionary saloon and hotel of mine, avowedly for evil purposes. Out of the fifteen agencies I talked to only three appeared to have no system of providing for the emergency they thought I wanted filled.

And yet there is supposed to be a rigid supervision of such places. What sort of inspection do you suppose can be in effect when a system such as I describe is permitted to exist?

Commandments for the Travelling Girl

By Dorothy Dix

WHEN thou travellest, oh, my daughter, put money in thy purse and consideration for other people in thy heart, for like unto a pebble in the shoe or a thorn in the flesh is the woman who borroweth the price of a ticket to get back home, and who thinketh that she oweth the Pullman Car Company and all that pertaineth thereto.

2—Remember, beloved, that thou art not the only pebble on the beach, and that thy fellow travellers have the same right to have their windows down that thou hast to have thine up.

3—Ask not of the station agent more than 536 times at what hour doth the six o'clock train leave, lest peradventure being an impatient man he bateth thee in consequence thereof.

4—Leave behind thee thy canary, and thy cat, and the wilted flowers, and the stale fruit that smelleth to heaven with which thy fool friends and thy sacred enemies load thee at parting, for, verily I say unto thee, that a grateful public shall arise and call down blessings upon the head of the woman who journeyeth with only one small bag in her hand.

5—Also, if thou possessest an infant that howleth by night and maketh sleep impossible to those in the neighborhood round about it, stay within thine own home, and thy reward shall be as the reward of her who hath compassion upon her fellow creatures.

6—When thou ariseth in the morning in the sleeping car, cover thy head and thy curl papers lest they offend the eyes of thy fellow travelers, and hasten swiftly to the dressing room, where thou shalt despatch thy toilette with great speed. Be not one of those she-dragons who bar the door while they marvelle their locks, and put ointment and paint upon their countenances, and dye their finger tips with henna, while their sisters moan and blaspheme in their kimonos without the portal, vainly seeking entrance.

7—When thou visiteth a strange place clamor not for the things thou hast at home, and mock not Paris because it hath not the customs of Squedunk, Ia., nor rail because thou canst not have buckwheat cakes and maple syrup in the Pension in Venice. Peradventure thou mayest even learn of the heathen by contemplating his ways.

8—When thou travellest in thine own country seek not the plague spot in the cities on which to feast thine eyes, for behold there is the Metropolitan Museum and the St. Patrick's Cathedral, and the Public Library in New York, as well as the Great White Way and Chinatown, and when thou travellest abroad wear not upon thy breast a flag to proclaim thy nationality, for thy voice shouteth that from afar, so that none can mistake thee.

9—Look not upon the picture postal card where it flaunteth itself in the hotel lobby, for it eateth up thy time and thy money, as doth a consuming fire, and thy friends at home arise and curse thee when it cumbereth up their morning mail.

10—Above all, oh, my daughter, when thou travellest, have not a Yale lock upon thy pocket book, nor lift thy voice in bowls of rage before the hotel clerk and bim curl roberth thee in the restaurant, because of thy good money from which thou art separated, for, behold! the Summer vacation land is a land wherein there is no place for the piker. If thou hast the price, pay it gladly, and if thou hast not the price, remain under thine own vine and fig tree.

Obstinate Acne Quickly Yields

Fine Remedy that Clears Skin of Pimples on Cheeks, Temples, Sides of Nose and Chin.

Acne attacks the glandular structure of the skin, more particularly those tiny glands that secrete fat.

And it is here that S. S. S., the famous blood purifier, is most active in its influence.

There is one ingredient in S. S. S. the purpose of which is so to stimulate the cells in the tissues that they select from the blood the nutriment that makes new skin and thus eliminates all irritants, acids and parasites that inflame the glands. There is a natural tendency of the fine network of blood vessels in the skin to throw off impurities, but where a persistent inflammatory process has invaded the skin, the natural repair work of the blood is interfered with. It requires the stimulating activity of S. S. S. to overcome such morbid conditions. If you have been troubled with acne, do not despair of a cure.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. The great Swift Laboratory in Atlanta, Ga., prepares this famous blood purifier, and you should take no chance by permitting anyone to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Company, 151 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

A sad-looking man went into a chemist's. "Can you give me," he asked, "something that will drive from my mind the thought of sorrow and bitter recollection?"

Then the chemist nodded, and put him up a little dose of quinine and wormwood and rhubarb and Epsom salts and a dash of castor-oil, and gave it to him, and for six months the man could not think of anything in the world except new schemes for getting the taste out of his mouth.

The portly lady had accidentally taken a rear seat in a car reserved for smokers. With unconcealed indignation she watched the man beside her fill his pipe.

"Sir," finally came her frigid tones, "smoking always makes me feel sick."

"Do it now, ma'am!" said the man, as he carefully lighted up; "then take my advice an' stop it!"

Corporal (to soldier)—Why is the blade of the sabre curved instead of straight?

Corporal—Humbug! The sabre is curved so as to fit the scabbard. If it was straight how would you get it into the crooked scabbard, blockhead?

Here is a "character" given to a servant on leaving her last situation:

"The bearer has been in my house a year, less eleven months. During this time she has shown herself diligent at the house door, frugal in work, mindful of herself, prompt in excuses, friendly towards men, faithful to her sweethearts, and honest when everything was out of the way."

A Gentle Hint

A little girl made a call at the house of a neighbor. She saw some apple parings on a plate, and said: "I smell apples."

"Yes," the lady replied, "I guess you smell those apple parings on the table."

"No, no," said the little miss, smacking her lips, "tain't them I smell. I smell whole apples."

Real Freedom

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

A MOTHER assigned a trivial household task to her daughter, and the girl rebelled. She preferred to loll in a chair and read the latest fiction.

"I detest housework," she snapped; "I despise that word 'Duty' you talk so much about; I hate being ordered around in this way. I will be glad when I am married and can do as I please."

And when the noble Bird of Freedom heard her make this speech, it hung its head on its breast, and drooped its tail feathers in shame.

It knew that no freedom comes with matrimony, but that freedom ends at its portals. It knew that the day was coming when the same girl would look back with a sigh at the liberty she enjoyed as a girl, and of which she now showed so little appreciation.

The mother also knew it, and her reply to her daughter's speech was a sigh. How many times a mother's answer is a sigh only the good Lord knows. It is an expression on earth, but that is recorded against the one who evoked it in heaven.

EXTRAVAGANCES

Though the amount is usually limited, there are few girls these days who do not have spending money with which to do as they please. Obsessed by the passion of possessing, they buy flowers, ribbons, hats, gloves, little necessities and more follies, few of which outlast their brief season. There is no one to object; no one to question; no one to scold when the bills come in. The girl who wants a pretty flower buys it without the nagging consciousness that it would be better to spend the money for potatoes. She is free, with her little or much, to do as she pleases.

The majority of girls are engaged in some sort of lucrative employment, and all their time is not their own, but the hour comes at last, when the typewriter is closed, the room is quiet, the sewing machine covered, and the books put back on their shelves. Often the day is too long, and the labor too arduous for the pay received, but it always ends at last and for a time the girl is free."

She has a few hours of sweet liberty when she may go for a ride, a swim, or to dance, or to lie undisturbed in a corner and rest. Her life, for a brief period, is all her own, with today's work ended and no intrusion of the duties of tomorrow.

But when asked to do a little household task for which she lacks inclination, she says irritably, "I will be glad when I am married and can do as I please."

The noble Bird of Freedom, my dear girls, is never an emblem of wifehood. That little gold band that is put on a girl's finger at the altar is a link in a chain which, in the great majority of cases, is as binding as that worn by a slave.

The married woman who has as much freedom as a girl is a creature existing only in fairy tale and imagination. Her time, her money, her thoughts, her soul and body are no longer her own. Even as a girl to serve herself, she condemns herself to life in the servitude of others when she marries.

She formerly purchased for one, and bought as she pleased. She now buys for two, often with less money to buy with, and must account for all she spends. In the same way that a child is not its own, neither may an hour be called hers to do with as she likes. If you doubt this, my dear girl, look at your mother.

WHAT SHE DOES

How often does she say, "I want this for myself?" Do you ever hear her express the intention of going where SHE pleases? How many times in your daily life have you seen her at her ease without household task in her hands? When she takes a seat isn't it that she may hold the baby?

Marry, by all means, and may you marry well and happily. But don't enter that state believing that you will be as free as a bird once you are a wife.

Go into it knowing the sacrifices you must make. Go into it knowing that nothing is purchased in this world without its price, and the price of love is the ending of all the precious freedom of girlhood.

Perhaps this knowledge may make you better appreciate the liberty you enjoy today, and give you an understanding of matrimony that will rob you of all discontent and envy if your days of girlhood are indefinitely prolonged.

Perhaps, also—and this is my greatest hope—it may make you more tender and helpful with the burdens of the one in whose chain of slavery you are unconsciously a link—your mother.

Use Two Languages

The Canadian Parliament is one of the few Parliaments in the world where speeches in two languages are allowed. This, of course, is due to the large French and English elements in Canada. For instance, when the Canadian House of Commons is sitting in committee, should a French-Canadian start to address the House in French, you may see the English chairman retire from his seat and allow a French chairman to take his place. In the same manner the official English reporter, cease work and a staff of French shorthand writers begin.

"Am I Not a Boy? Yes, I Am--Not!"

One Proof Is That I Wear an Apron

BY NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1915, by International News Service

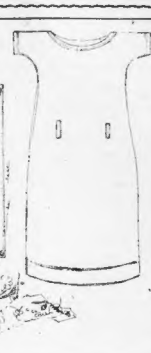
The pattern for the comfy affair.

Good for athletic stunts—plenty of foot room if you want to tell the maid you're "not at home."

You can do your morning beauty exercise in it.

You can pick up your eraser without bending your knees which they say is most awfully good for you.

My clever little mother, whose own little gowns are pretty and sensible, too.



The apron I work in.

By NELL BRINKLEY

I KNOW plenty of lazy girls who do their little part of the world's work at home, as I do, away from the glare and the courtesy-killing violence of the big town. Almost all of them work in rigs that are either very pretty or very ugly and painfully uncomfy, or very comfy and ugly. Not one has one bob pretty and comfy. Not one has a little outfit that is feminine yet boyish, pretty, and gives absolute leeway to young limbs and arms and waists that must bend over some sort of task. So I, who bend my back, too—who like to look pretty, too—who need, oh much much to be comfy while I scratch for a living and who envy little kids their half-socks and sandals, their bare knees and necks and heads, their rompers and lack of petticoats, I laid away my sentimental Buffys and Bettys, who love one mother—oh, so desperately—for one minus and "drawers" plus of working clothes. Oh, all kinds I made, I did. Those that were too pretty were too fussy, too—I shook my Scandinavian locks and crumpled them up. Those that were too comfy happened to be either utterly impractical or altogether too ugly for any girl to go any farther with. So I flipped them up.

Then I fell back on what every girl finds infinite strange relief in till she's a grandmother—my mother. I called her into consultation—and together with my wild ideas and insistence on beauty and her genius for understanding the subtle ways of a needle and thread and her smiling common sense, we evolved a thing of use and beauty and a joy forever. Seems to me most any man who had his rathers would like to see his sweetheart or his busy house-hired girl of a mate in a work garb like this rather than in some of the dibbed frights, the tie-around kind that cut you in two, or that modest, dishonored makeshift some women make do duty all day long—the kimono. And don't you know men folks are everlasting preachers about their women folks being comfy. This little work-apron certainly is that.

Here are facts: I am usually short on those. That's mother's proof that I am a girl. Turn you Cheshire cat smiles away, Bettys and Billys, and let me tell how this honorable apron is made. I've made a faithful pattern from it spread out upon the floor. The real labor ones, where I get good and dirty—ink on my nose, grime on my elbows, grubby hands and all that—are made of blue and pink fine-checked seersucker gingham. Those that are just a little more company—to loaf about the house in these hot days—are made of cotton, crepe or anything pretty and washable that you like. Twenty-seven inches wide, if you please, the goods must be; then there need be no piecing on the sides. And twice twenty-seven inches is plenty of footroom. There is a hole for your head, very short sleeves, and just the two seams down the sides. The back is as innocent of fastening as the front. Nary a buttonhole or a hook and eye. That ought to please any cynic and make 'em sit up and crow. Just on a line below the hip bone there are two belt-straps back and front, and through these goes a belt and a couple of inches wide, fastened with two buttons. On the humbler ones a hem fold and stitching about the neck and arms and a deep hem is all the decoration there is. On the niftiest ones there is narrow lace in the sleeves and neck and a belt of a different color. The belt ties closely, but doesn't pinch. That draws the apron into folds. These are facts.

Now for the beauty and the joy of it. You wouldn't believe how pretty it is on a girl. For it falls into every line of her body, gracefully and modestly, too. It has the same simple attraction that a little kid's clothes always have. There's the beauty of it—simplicity, good lines and any lovely color, and the joys of it—it goes over your head, the sleeves are a joke, the neck low, it's as cool as a Lady Constance Richardson costume in this warm town, corsets with it are "taboo," it hasn't even a sash around the waist; you can reach and catch and throw a ball to your heart's desire. Under it, if it pleases you, when there is not going to be "people," there are only stockings, chemisette and knickers of china silk or thin muslin and sandals. When there is to be "people," a one-piece slip has to be added on underneath and slippers instead of sandals, if you please.

Their Married Life

Their First Dinner in Paris Is Astonishingly Cheap and Good

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

PARIS at 7 o'clock of a Summer evening! The gleaming lights, the gay gowns of the women, the trees, the outdoor cafes—Helen, clinging to Warren's arm, walked down the broad boulevard athrill with the glamor of it all.

It had been just four hours since they arrived from Cherbourg—tired, dusty, travel-stained. But now rested and in cooler clothes, they started out to find, as Warren expressed it, "a place to feed."

Where should hey go? Helen suggested a number of well-known places that she had read of in the guide book. But Warren was determined to have their first dinner at a restaurant he had been particularly fond of when he was in Paris eight years before.

"Although he had forgotten the name, he had full confidence of his sense of location. They had taken a bus to Porte St. Martin and had walked several blocks in what he felt was the right direction.

"Must be around here somewhere," frowning down a street that was plainly unfamiliar. "I don't believe they've moved."

"Isn't that a restaurant over there—where the lights are?" asked Helen hopefully.

"By Jove! believe that's the place," as they crossed the wide street. "I'd have sworn it was on the other side."

Entering, they were met by an officious headwaiter, who hustled ahead, ushering them to a table in an inner room.

"Oh, we don't want to sit back here," objected Warren. "Give us a table out in the veranda."

"Sorry, monsieur, but they're all taken."

"Why, there's half a dozen vacant ones up at that end."

"They're all reserved, monsieur," repeated the headwaiter stolidly.

Warren turned to Helen with a scowling "So they know that game over here, too. This fellow's looking for five francs. Well, what do you say? Want to sit back here—or look up some other place?"

"Oh, dear, let's go somewhere else," resenting the supercilious air of the head waiter, who stood by impatiently tapping the dinner card with his pencil.

Outside Warren demanded curtly: "Now where to? It's getting late and I'm hungry. We don't want to wander around all night, you know."

"But, dear, we don't want to stay there. That man was almost insolent."

They walked on for several blocks, Helen resting anxiously in every direction, while Warren maintained the scowling, sullen, silence that always foreboded a storm.

"Oh, there, dear," eagerly, as she caught sight of a balcony, high above the street, with white clothed tables and rose-shaded lights. Doesn't that look like a good place?"

The first glimpse was disappointing. The room was crowded. Would they have to go somewhere else?

The next moment the head waiter was bowing them toward it. Two other waiters rushed forward with fresh linen and silver, and a third placed a footstool at Helen's feet.

"Oh, dear, it's a wonderful place," slinking back with a sense of infinite relief that a critical situation had been safely passed.

"Well, we'll not get enthusiastic till we see what the food's like," grunted Warren, somewhat appeased by the attention they had received.

"I can't make anything out of this," scowling at the menu, which was illegibly written in French with pale purple ink.

"Will you have our 5 franc table d'hote dinner, Monsieur?" asked a waiter at his elbow.

"Umph, you speak English? Well, that simplifies things. What do we get with that dinner?"

"Hors d'oeuvres, potage, fish, entree, roast, salade, entremeds and a bottle of red or white Bordeaux."

"That sounds pretty good," assented Warren. "All right, we'll try it."

To Helen the atmosphere of the place and the street scene below was one of enchantment. She was beginning to feel the charm of Paris.

With the hors d'oeuvres and first glass of wine, the scowling frown on Warren's brow had relaxed, and with the thick green Saint Germain soup he grew almost genial.

"Just taste that fish! It's great. What they call filet of sole at home is only flounder. We never see the real thing there. This is an alright place."

"Oh, I'm so glad we found this, dear. For I felt you were getting out of humor, and would blame me for not staying at that other place," exclaimed Helen, who womanlike, always wanted to go back over a situation, instead of being content to leave well enough alone. "And I couldn't bear to have our first dinner in Paris an unhappy one."

"Who in thunder was going to make it unhappy, unless you were?" growled Warren, who hated post-mortems. "What the devil are you harping on it now for, anyway?"

"Oh, I only meant, dear—" began Helen, hastening to conciliate. But fortunately at this moment the waiter uncovered the fowl, roasted to a delicate brown, and Warren's attention was diverted from Helen's untactful remark.

"Dear, there's not so much difference in the gowns worn by the French women," commented Helen, now anxious to change the subject. "There aren't any sensational dresses here. That woman over there in pink is rather striking, but any of the others might be in New York."

"Well, this isn't the sort of place where you'd see much in the way of dress. Some night I'll take you to supper at Maxim's. The gowns there'll be striking enough."

"Oh, are we going to Maxim's?" delightedly. "I thought it was a dreadful place."

"Not so dreadful as they want you to think—that's their best asset. You'll enjoy it pretty tame. More than half the crowd will be rubbernecks like ourselves."

But Helen had read and heard much of Maxim's, and as she glanced over the food salad she gazed down on the gay boulevard in eager anticipation of a supper there.

"Dear, what is this?" as the waiter placed before them two small brown jars filled with a thick creamy substance.

"Search me!" shrugged Warren, investigating it with a spoon.

"That's Creme de Zeigny, monster. Will you have sugar with it?"

"I'll try it straight first."

"Oh, it's delicious, dear," exclaimed Helen enthusiastically. "It's sort of sour, salty and sweet! More like a delicious liquid cheese."

VERY SMOOTH

"By Jove, that is pretty smooth," admitted Warren. Isn't this the stuff the Phantoms raved over when they got back last year? We'll have this often—that's sure."

When the waiter had cleared off the table, Warren lit his cigar and turned back, relaxed, and with the thick green Saint Germain soup he grew almost genial.

"Just taste that fish! It's great. What they call filet of sole at home is only flounder. We never see the real thing there. This is an alright place."

"Oh, I'm so glad we found this, dear. Do You Know That—

What is believed to be the first motor-car chapel ever constructed is being used in the United States by the Catholic Church Extension Society in the sections of the Southwest where the members of the church are too widely scattered to have stationary churches or chapels. It penetrates regions which railroads do not reach. The equipment includes all the rites of the Catholic Church in regular form and with appropriate solemnity.

There is an old tradition at Tours to which soldiers adhere strictly, according to Comte Austin de Croze, who delivered a lecture on French folklore in London recently. When the ring is being put on her finger at the altar, the bride takes care that it does not pass beyond the second joint. Otherwise she would never hope to be absolute sovereign in her new home.

A bee will carry twice its own weight in honey or wax.

A hedgehog was the means of derailing an engine leader at Sandbach, Cheshire, England, and holding up the traffic on the North Western line for half an hour recently. Investigations made after the tender was derailed showed that the hedgehog had crept between the point rail and the side rail, and, being trapped when the points were moved, prevented them closing properly.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

I SHOWED Pa & Ma a peece in a boys magazeen that offered a peice of ten dollars for the best short story of ad-venture wrote by a boy not ouver twelve years old. I frold Pa that I was going to try for the prize, & Pa sed rite away that he wud help me rite the story.

Way doant you let Bobbie rite it hiself? sed Ma. I doant think it wod be fair to the other littel boys who will com-pete to have you coach along with your wunderful, marvelous brain & win that ten dollars. Let the kids have there own competishun, Ma sed.

So this is the story I rote. It had to be less than a hundred words & it is pritty hard to rite a story inside of a hundred words & have the whole plot in. This is how I rote it:

It was midnite in Mexico. A silvery moon smiled at the Rio Grande which wound its way through the lonely desert.

Crack! A pistol shot rang out & Rod Antonio pitched from his horse.

One glanst was enuff for the two outlaws.

The Sheriff was ded.

That story won't win any prize, Bobbie, sed Pa. Pa didn't a good peece of work at all. I guess you better let me rite it all suver for you.

Ma seen that I felt kind of bad. Every time wen I feel bad my lip gits kind of stiff. I can't help it & I can't grin wen I try. So Ma patted me on the cheek & sed sed Bobbie, that is a good story, & I bet you will win the prize. Yure father can't help you in this contest, excep, maybe, he can help you to spend the ten dollars wen you win it.

He will nerver win the prize, sed Pa. The story is very crude.

I don't think you are a competent critick, sed Ma. You never rote any stories yourself that won any prizes, & now you are trying to tell little Bobbie how to rite. You are always that way, Ma sed, trying to tell peopul how to do things that you cannot do yureself. I will bet you a ten dollar hatbrim against a ten dollar hat, Ma sed, that little Bobbie will win the prize. I'm going even money her, Ma sed, & I am taking Bobbie against the whole field. That is the kind of a better I am, Ma sed.

Stop enuff, day brefore yesterday I got a letter from the boys' magazeen & there was a new ten dollar bill in it.

Well, sed Ma to Pa, cum across with that ten dollars for my hat.

I haven't the change now, sed Bobbie, for your neckthar fall down dollars until payday.

That is the way Pa paid his bet & wud he brook now only Ma gaiv me the ten back & sed she wud wait till payday for her hat. Pa thinks he knows lots, but Ma is a better better.

"None So Deaf"

With a tired expression, the hard-worked doctor answered his surgery bell one evening. It was only Mike with a big story as to how his baby would not sleep a wink, and would the medico give him something for her.

Feeling that it was a case no bigger matter, the doctor dispatched Mike with some sleeping powders for the child.

Next day, meeting the Irishman in the street, he asked him how the powders had worked.

"Them powders did the trick foine, doc!" said Mike.

"That's good! Made the baby sleep all night—eh?"

"Faith, no!" responded Mike. "We gave the darlint a dose, but she wouldn't sleep at all, at all; so we just took them powders ourselves, we did, and went right off to sleep, and niver heard the swate baby cry one till any more."

The Difference

A boy can imagine almost anything. He can jog an old shotgun about all day without firing at a living thing and be under the impression that he is having a howling good time; but all attempts to induce a boy to imagine that he is killing Indians when he is sawing wood have proven futile.

Those Afternoons on the Water are delightful—but thirsty. "A pail—some ice—Clicquot and thou," said Omar, in effect. Ladies prefer Clicquot to alcoholic drinks; it's the only safe refreshment if you're overheated from exertion.

STOCK MARKET AND FINANCIAL NEWS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Trading in stocks was quiet this morning and prices had a tendency to descend. New York was weaker comparatively than Boston. In this city at the end of the hour the Mellens were fractionally higher and Boston Elevated had shaded. The weakness of the London warrant markets had no influence upon copper shares here. Calumet and Arizona, Superior Copper and U. S. Smelting made small gains. Pond Creek sold higher and Alaska Gold lower.

All the prominent issues in New York were then off to fractions. Union Pacific was down ¼, Reading ¼, Canadian Pacific ½, American Can ⅛, and Amalgamated ⅛. With a gain of ¼, New York Central was about the only leader to show any advance.

Stocks Dull in New York.

When the week opened the New York market was appraised by uncertainty in Europe over the war situation in the Balkans and by the fear that 100,000 trainmen and conductors will strike. These factors not only restricted business but left some irregularities in prices. Leaders ranged lower and among the early declines were, Steel common ⅛, Union Pacific ⅜, Southern Pacific ⅜, Reading ½, Lehigh Valley ½, C. & O. ¼, Canadian Pacific 1, American Smelting ¼ and Amalgamated ½.

Union Pacific, Reading and Canadian Pacific soon made complete recoveries. New York Central advanced ½ and Anaconda and American Can gained.

The Curb was quiet. Americans in London were irregular and narrow.

Canadian Pacific was lower there.

More Gold for Europe.

Gold to the amount of $1,500,000 in bars has been engaged in New York for shipment to Paris tomorrow. It is reported that imminent engagements may bring the total up to $3,000,000. Last week $5,000,000 was shipped to Europe and $1,000,000 was received in New York from Canada. It would not surprise bankers if the total obtained in this country for Paris this week should amount to $5,000,000. London is now retaining most of the gold it receives from South Africa, and Berlin is less desirous of adding to its supply. But Paris is still drawing on New York, although exchange rates in themselves do not justify the movement. American bankers are not pleased to have gold leaving this country on the eve of crop movements.

U. P. Sale of S. P. Stock.

Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line managements have announced the terms under which stockholders may subscribe for pro rata certificates of interest in the 883,576 Southern Pacific shares which the Central Trust Company of New York will issue as trustee.

Each certificate will entitle the registered owner, on making affidavit that he is not acting for any Union Pacific stockholder in concert with any individual firm or corporate interest for control of the Southern Pacific in the interest of the Union Pacific Railroad, to receive a stock certificate for the number of shares of the capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company, together with all dividends declared by the Southern Pacific Company, together with all dividends declared by the Southern Pacific Company, after January 2, 1913, collected by the trustee prior to conversion.

The subscription privilege applies to all Union Pacific stockholders registered by August 7, 1913, to the extent of 27 per cent. of their holdings of Union Pacific stock, preferred or common.

Warrants will be issued as soon as possible after August 7 next to entitle the holder to subscribe for amounts of $100 or more and fractional warrants will not entitle the holder to subscribe, but will be exchangeable in amounts aggregating at least $100. Fractional warrants desired to complete full shares to be disposed of must be bought or sold in the market. By August 4 all fractional warrants will be valueless.

Subscription warrants must be surrendered to the Central Trust Company of New York, 54 Wall street, New York, or to the agents, Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., Ltd., 8 Bishopsgate, London, E. C., England, by the stockholders or by the persons to whom assigned, on or before the date on which the right of subscription shall terminate, accompanied by payment of the first instalment or the full amount payable, and all warrants not so surrendered with such payment on or before said date shall be void and of no value. If not exercised after the first instalment is paid, the purchase price, when paid in full, will operate as a forfeiture of all rights in respect of the subscription and the instalments previously paid.

Said Trustee, directly or through Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., Ltd., as its agents in London, will, on surrender of the warrants and on payment of the first instalment, issue Subscription Receipts which will be transferable by assignment, and which must be surrendered on or before the date to be set in said further circular, accompanied by payment of the full amount remaining payable. Each such Subscription Receipt will be issued under and subject to the terms and provisions of said decree and will entitle the registered owner to receive from the Trustee a proxy appointing such attorneys, agents and proxies as the registered owner shall no minate in writing to appear and vote at any stockholders' meeting of the Southern Pacific Company upon the number of shares represented by such Subscription Receipt for the same terms and upon any matter duly brought before such meeting; provided, however, that such registered owner shall file with the Trustee, at its office in the City of New York, on or before the tenth day preceding such meeting, an affidavit to the effect, in substance, that such registered owner does not own any shares of the capital stock of the Union Pacific Railroad Company and is not acting for or on behalf of any holder of the Union Pacific Railroad Company or in concert, agreement or understanding with any other person, firm or corporation, for the control of the Southern Pacific Company, in the interest of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, but in his own behalf in good faith.

Said Trustee, directly or through said agents in London, will, on surrender of the warrants or Subscription Receipts, as the case may be, issue Certificates of Interest, registered in the names of the purchasers, to those making payment in full.

No subscription or assignment of this privilege will be recognized unless made on the forms approved by the Union Pacific Railroad Company, or by the said Trustee. No holder of the stock of the Union Pacific Railroad Company shall be entitled to any of the above-mentioned certificates unless the terms of subscription herein specified are fully complied with. Payments must be made at the dates to be specified in said further circular and in accordance with the provisions stated above. Checks or drafts in payment of subscriptions must be drawn in favor of the Central Trust Company of New York, in New York funds, or in favor of Baring Brothers & Co., Ltd., in London funds, as the case may be, and for the exact amounts covering the respective instalments, and correspondence in relation to subscriptions should be addressed to them.

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY
OREGON SHORT LINE RAILROAD COMPANY
By FREDERIC V. S. CROSBY, Treasurer.
165 Broadway, New York.

New York, N. Y., July 11, 1913.

Financial News in Brief.

In 1912 coal production in West Virginia reached the total of 66,786,687 short tons, valued at the mines at $82,792,234.

Steel orders are now amounting to about 20,000 tons a day less than shipments and new railroad equipment business is insignificant.

Many of the iron mills which shut down for Fourth of July holidays have not resumed operations. Big iron demand is slackening and prices are easing off.

German tobacconists are organizing to protect themselves from the tobacco being made in their country by the "American Tobacco Trust." Through six factories the latter controls one-fourth of the entire cigar trade of Germany.

For the six months ending with June last the American Telephone and Telegraph Company's net earnings amounted to $20,255,853.95, compared with $18,062,202.78 in the corresponding 1912 period. The net of the Bell system in United States amounted to $25,070,895, compared with $23,277,446.

Street Car Strike Riots in Kentucky

LEXINGTON, Ky., July 14.—An attempt to run street cars in Lexington today resulted in general rioting in which many strikebreakers were injured, some of them probably fatally. The first car started from the barns, manned by strikebreakers and guarded by deputy sheriffs, was attacked by strike sympathizers who burned the car, disarmed the officers and threw the strikebreakers into the street. The police were fighting with the strikers and made but few arrests.

Creditors Pursue T. H. Perkins & Co.

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed today against Neil A. Diver of Melrose and Matthew A. O'Neil of Somerville—members of the stock exchange firm of T. H. Perkins & Co.—at the instance of Fred S. Gowley, who claims $1,237; John H. Cookley, who claims $187, and Walter C. Smith, who claims $1,936. The alleged act of bankruptcy was the assignment of property to Frederic Mellouish some time ago. The firm featured their dealings in copper shares. The two men named were partners in the firm. Mr. Perkins left the business upon his retirement.

Chaplain Charlton to Leave Navy Yard

The term of shore duty has expired for Chaplain Charles Mangus Charlton, who has been stationed at the Boston navy yard since August 15, 1910, and after a short leave of absence period he will be ordered to sea. He is the only Episcopalian chaplain on the active list and ranks as commander.

Chaplain Arthur W. Stone, now at Newston, Vt., on leave of absence, will replace him.

Spared Eviction, Nurses Sick Son

Mrs. Hamburg and Three Children in Dorchester Get Aid.

Mrs. Carl Hamburg of No. 220 Westville street, Dorchester, temporarily relieved of the pangs of hunger and the danger of eviction, spent most of her time today nursing the oldest of her three children, Carl, five, who is ill with the whooping cough.

According to Mrs. Hamburg, her husband disappeared more than a week ago. Since then she has provided for her three children and herself as best she could on twenty-five cents a day.

She says she felt behind in her rent. James J. Byrne, agent of the property, when he came to collect her, later went for possession. The authorities have been notified. In the meantime Mrs. Hamburg is securing provisions through the aid of Representative Peter J. Donahue.

Boston Bathers Use Rubber Stays

Rubber corsets are being worn at Boston bathing beaches. The forms of the corsets are of wholesome. As in fitting the corsets originated in New Bedford.

WAITRESSES COOL AT FIRE IN RESTAURANT

Smoke and flames held no terrors for a score of waitresses who stuck to their posts and delivered orders to early customers in Child's restaurant at No. 607 Washington street today while firemen were fighting a fire under their feet. The fire practically destroyed the kitchen ceiling and caused a damage estimated at $500.

The customers also remained at the tables and enjoyed the novelty of breakfasting and witnessing the firemen in action at the same time.

One of the kitchen help sounded an alarm. A few moments later Washington street was filled with fire apparatus and a squad of firemen rushed into the restaurant. Two waitresses near the door calmly pointed down the basement stairs and then went on with their work. Traffic in Washington street was held up while hundreds of persons on their way to work stopped to watch the firemen.

Bolivian Medals to Mayor and Governor

Eight Other Boston Men Honored for Promoting Trade Relations.

Ten Boston men—the list of names headed by those of Governor Foss and Mayor Curley—have been awarded medals from the Government of Bolivia, in recognition of services in furthering trade relations between Bolivia and Boston.

Robert J. Bottomly, who served as American Secretary for the International Congress of Chambers of Commerce, presented the medals. He himself received one, and the others, besides the Mayor and the Governor, were James J. Storrow, Joseph B. Russell, George S. Smith, Robert Winsor, Edward A. Filene, John H. Fahey and James A. McKibben.

Consul General Ballivian of Bolivia sent in persons not entitled to go with each medal. He was a delegate to the Congress of Chambers of Commerce here last year.

CASSIDY SHOWS HOW PURE FOOD DEMAND GROWS

WATCH FOR THE WOMAN WITH GREEN PARASOL

Mr. Cassidy reviews today the action of the leaders of the three great political parties—Democrat, Progressive and Republican—in declaring their platforms this Fall, which will contain a pure food plank. He tells you how the pure food movement is growing throughout the country, and that it is only a question of time when all dishonest food dopesters will be driven out of business.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

The indorsement of the AMERICAN'S pure food campaign by the leaders of the Democratic, Progressive and Republican parties is an indication of how relentlessly the pure food campaign is sweeping over the country.

I want to commend Mayor Fitzgerald, Lieutenant-Governor Walsh, Charles S. Bird, Matthew Hale and Chairman Hatfield of the Republican state committee for their admirable statements printed in Sunday's AMERICAN.

Their foresight in anticipating the official indorsement of their respective parties stamps them as leaders. It's the people's fight and will surely help them to win.

When the AMERICAN started its pure food campaign seven months ago Massachusetts rested secure in her ignorance of food adulterants. Today she is alive to her responsibilities.

Believed in State Board.

For years she had trusted unfailingly in a State Board of Health. She believed this State Board one of the premier boards of the country. Since the expose of the State Board of Health by the AMERICAN, Massachusetts knows differently.

The State Board of Health itself admits its need of reorganization. Some of the men most closely allied with it have practically admitted in statements that the Board must be reorganized.

These days the people are not satisfied with the issuance of scientific pamphlets. They require action. The Canton epidemic, that cost eighteen lives, showed itself the uselessness of pamphlets as against practical action.

Mayor Fitzgerald hit the nail on the head when he said: "The party which would refuse to put a pure food plank in its platform is not worthy of public confidence. I can conceive of no greater burden our country than a war on the dishonest food dopesters who deliberately deceive the."

G. O. P. Chairman Keen.

Chairman Hatfield of the Republican State Committee is just as keen for a pure food plank. As a leader of the Republican party he has had occasion enough to see the attempts made by the party leaders in the House of Representatives in opposing the people's demand for a reorganization of the State Board of Health.

The announcement of Lieutenant-Governor Walsh in favor of pure food last week opened their eyes to the popularity of health legislation. They realized that such a competent judge of public opinion anticipated the trend politically. It was time for them to climb on the pure food bandwagon or get into line.

It is a gratifying recognition of the AMERICAN'S pure food campaign. It shows that a righteous cause will always prevail. That what the people realize what they want they are pretty apt to get it.

The recognition given the pure food campaign here is but an addition to the good work being done throughout the country. By men like Dr. Wiley, Dr. Alsberg, the chief of the bureau of Chemistry, Secretary of Agriculture Houston in Washington, Alfred McCann in New York, Professor Lewis Allyn in Westfield, Dr. Warren in Atlantic City, Governor Fielder of New Jersey and other food champions in various sections.

The pure food movement has come to stay. The dishonest food dopesters have heard their death knell.

At this season of the year, when touring is in full swing, it may not be out of order to call attention to that stock piece of advice issued by all the tire companies as to the advisability of keeping out of ruts. The practice of driving in ruts will wear out a tire much faster than any other individual bad habit of motorists. Obviously this method of driving causes the wear to be part of the tire least calculated to bear it. The main strength of the tier lies in the tread. The side walls are made comparatively thin because wear on them is not expected, and yet by running in ruts that is exactly where the hardest wear falls. Then after the rubber has been worn off, water and all work their way in and the end of that tire is plainly in view. This applies also to the practice of driving the car so close to the curb that the edges of the tires touch.

Two hundred dollars reward for speaking just eight words:

Just $25 a word is the tidy sum the lucky person will receive besides an all-day outing at Bass Point tomorrow—"Boston AMERICAN Day"—for recognizing "The Woman with the Green Parasol," whose full front view picture is the identical costume she will wear, will appear in tomorrow's evening edition of the Boston AMERICAN.

The only requirement is that the person who identifies "The Woman with the Green Parasol" must have in his or her hand, in plain sight, a copy of the Boston evening AMERICAN of tomorrow, July 15, and shall say to her:

"You are the Woman with the Green Parasol."

"The Woman with the Green Parasol" will be at Bass Point, Nahant, tomorrow evening in plain view of all. The Boston AMERICAN absolutely guarantees this. A photograph of "The Woman with the Green Parasol" was published in yesterday's editions of the Boston Sunday AMERICAN. The $200 reward is offered and will be presented to the lucky person by this newspaper.

"The Woman with the Green Parasol" will be at Bass Point between 8:30 and 9:30 p. m. It will be easy to recognize her from her photograph. You could not get $200 vacation money any easier than by enjoying "Boston AMERICAN Day" at Bass Point and capturing "The Woman with the Green Parasol."

One dollar's worth of attractions at Bass Point will be absolutely free by presenting the Bass Point Day coupon on Tuesday afternoon from 2 to 6 o'clock. Half-price tickets—the fare one way on The Bass Point boats—will be provided to all holders of AMERICAN coupons. The regular round trip fare is fifty cents. It will be twenty-five cents tomorrow to all coupon holders, so that everyone will have an opportunity to get the $200 cash reward for capturing "The Woman with the Green Parasol."

Remember the eight words and don't forget that the person who identifies "The Woman with the Green Parasol" must have a copy of the Boston Evening AMERICAN in his or her hand in plain sight.

Commercial Peace in New England Only When the New Haven Monopoly Is Destroyed

And Massachusetts May Do Her Part, by Acquiring Control of the Boston & Maine Stock, Now Held by the Boston Holding Company, by Virtue of the Infamous Merger Act, and at the Same Time Retrieve the Most Stupendous Blunder in the Annals of Railroad Legislation in the Bay State

The AMERICAN calls attention to the statement of Commissioners Clements and Marble concerning the PRESENT CONTROL of the Boston & Maine by the New Haven.

It is a STRONG STATEMENT by men who represent our national government in the regulation of our railroads. They are MEN OF ABILITY AND ACHIEVEMENT and RAILROAD EXPERTS who are making matters appertaining to railroads their life study.

* * * We would give weight to the suggestion that the merger HAS SO OVERLOADED THE EXECUTIVE HEADS OF THE ENTIRE AGGREGATION AS TO IMPAIR NOT ONLY CORRECT AND ECONOMICAL FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION, BUT ALSO EFFICIENCY AND SAFETY OF OPERATION. This suggestion is not based on a consideration of a mileage, but of the complexity of the New England railroads, and of the necessity of these railroads for close and even intensive superintendence. THE BOSTON & MAINE AND THE NEW HAVEN ARE SHOWN BY THE REPORT TO BE SEPARABLE ORGANICALLY. THEY ARE NOT ONE SYSTEM, BUT TWO SYSTEMS UNDER ONE MANAGEMENT. Therefore, closer superintendence, with corresponding gains in efficiency and safety, might be expected from a dissolution of the merger.

NO COMPETITION BETWEEN CARRIERS IS UNIMPORTANT. The fact that a line carries little tonnage does not prove that it is valueless to the public. ITS POTENTIAL COMPETITION SERVES ALWAYS TO INSURE BETTER SERVICE AND FAIRER TREATMENT BY THE OTHER LINES. Occasionally it has an influence upon rates. MOREOVER, ANY SUPPRESSION OF COMPETITION INVOLVES LARGER ISSUES, INCLUDING THE INJURIOUS EFFECT OF PRIVATE MONOPOLY UPON THE COMPETITIVE SOCIETY WHICH TOLERATES IT, which must be discussed by those who are charged with the duty of legislation.

When does the national administration propose to INVOKE the anti-trust law against this railroad monopoly? Every hour's delay COSTS SOMETHING to this community. The facts which would go to make up the record are well known and accessible. The proceedings of the government against the New Haven's control of the Boston & Maine will not be in the nature of new proceedings.

Let the CAMPAIGN against this monopoly be PUSHED with all EXPEDITION, that we may sooner have peace. In the meantime, the Governor might well reconvene the Legislature and call upon it to exercise the right of the Commonwealth to ACQUIRE the BOSTON & MAINE'S STOCK held by the Boston Holding Company, which is the source of the present control by the New Haven.

This right Massachusetts RESERVED to herself when she FOOLISHLY PERMITTED the New Haven to take over the Boston & Maine five years ago. It was a STUPENDOUS BLUNDER, and we cannot too quickly retrieve it.

The AMERICAN deludes itself with no hope that the Legislature will do anything in the public interest which the present railroad managers oppose. A worse aggregation never disgraced a sovereign State than the men who comprise our Legislature this year, but it will make a beginning.

A Good Start by the New Members of the Public Service Board

Mr. George W. Anderson and Mr. George P. Lawrence have made a most auspicious beginning of their careers upon the Public Service Commission. Mr. Anderson insists upon public hearings and Mr. Lawrence agrees with him. Therefore, the board will have public hearings in the future.

They are right. Let us have all the light we can on matters clothed with public interest. Light is a great enemy of bad germs. It will be one of the efficient remedies for some of our present maladies. Let us have more light and still more light.

It is particularly pleasing to note this attitude in Commissioner Lawrence, and the AMERICAN hopes that it shows the bent of his mind toward his new duties. We have known Mr. Anderson's independence and courageous public spirit. We expected this from him and are not surprised. We were not so sure of Mr. Lawrence, and his attitude is all the more gratifying.

The AMERICAN hopes that it is a good portent.

The Cruise of the "Piffle"

"I'LL NEVER, NEVERGO TO WAR!" SAID BRAVE COMMANDER JUICE,- "IF FOREIGN FOES INVADE OUR SHORES I'LL WAVE A FLAG OF TRUCE!".

"Oh, pshaw! The idea!" Scarcely had these ringing and sailor-like words been uttered by Admiral Professor Juice, the gallant commander of the battleship "Piffle," when the lookout shouted, "Boat load of Japs coming to attack us!" Turning to his crew the fearless old salt said, "Attention, men! Are the refreshments ready? Then let the enemy come on!" The next moment a crowd of hostile Japanese rushed aboard, headed by Commander Itchy Mutchy, among whom were several Honest Japanese School Boys, who at once began to make photographs and sketches, shouting, "Honorable battleship surrender, quick!" Stepping firmly forward Admiral Juice waved an olive branch, while at the same time two daring young sailors advanced, named respectively J. Egbert Dilworthy and Harcourt V. Littleneck, one bearing a tray of nut sundaes while the other cut a large watermelon and offered slices to the visitors! "Help yourselves to the lady fingers!" said Admiral Juice, politely. The effect was instantaneous! The Japanese gave a wild shout of laughter and the next moment they were rolling on the deck in paroxysms of mirth, which increased in violence until they were seized with convulsions, their buttons flew off, and they lay helpless! Admiral Juice then ordered them to be put back in their boat and carefully returned to their ship! HE HAD WON TH- BATTLE WITHOUT THE LOSS OF A SINGLE LIFE! Suddenly, without a moment's warning, a ghastly and blood-curdling——To be Continued—Likely!

"Nonsense!" Craig declared. for you for many years to come."

"But," protested the girl, her eyes dark and her voice trembling, "my father is no longer young, and I must never be a burden to him or to anybody else in all the world. I have a superstitious dread of that."

"Don't be superstitious," the man warned her, with a smile. "It is a sure sign that you are overworked and tired when you feel so. I know, for I have felt so myself several times in my life. You will be as comfortable as you are now until you marry, and then your husband will care for you."

He had begun the sentence teasingly, but as he spoke the last words he became grave.

"It is," he added, "one of the things that a decent man looks forward to—taking care of his wife and providing her with all she wants."

The change in his tone startled his listener and put her on her guard. She lifted her head proudly.

"And every self-respecting woman feels that she would never marry if she had to be entirely dependent upon her husband!" she exclaimed.

The man looked at her in astonishment. "Do you feel like that about marriage?" he asked curiously. "Why, it is a man's privilege to care for a woman and to support her."

"That may be," she returned with decision, "but while a woman might be willing to have her husband support her—if she knew that it was his pleasure to do so and that she was quite equal to caring for herself—she would despise the thought that she had to marry to get a home, clothes and food. I would sooner die!"

"You are right," he acknowledged gravely, "and I respect your feeling. But," again smiling, "what about the theatre? You will go with me, will you not? Please do!"

This time the girl did not answer as promptly as she had when he first suggested the evening of "celebration." She appreciated dimly that she was finding this young man dangerously agreeable and that after she had talked with him it was hard for her to turn her thoughts from him to her work. She did not feel that she was wise in yielding to the impulsive desire to see him oftener. Her face betrayed none of the doubts and fancies that were hurrying through her mind, and the man, waiting for her reply, did not suspect her inward perturbation. At last she spoke, courteously, but firmly.

"Thank you, Mr. Craig," she said, "but I really think I ought to study this week and to deny myself any diversion that may make it difficult for me to get up and go to work each morning. Moreover I may have to work one or two evenings. So I know that it is my duty to decline your invitation, tempting as it is."

But the Texan was not to be thus easily dismissed.

"All right," he said, "but I will not accept your decision unless you accompany it with the promise that you will go to the theatre with me next week, after I return from Boston."

As she looked into his appealing eyes Mary's determination wavered, then failed her. He was so good-looking and so pleasant, and she did want to go to the theatre with him! Should she accept?

"Yes," she heard herself saying, "perhaps I may be able to make time to accept your kind suggestion, a little later—possibly on some evening after you return from Boston."

A EUGENIC LOVE SONG

(Infringement acknowledged.)

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

O, have you seen fair Inez, my fond Eugenic dove?
Her temperature is ninety-nine, not over nor above.
And happy should the lover be that she's the sweetheart of—
My cultivated, sanitated, vaccinated love.

Her soft breath gently comes and goes with perfect respiration,
The muscles tense about her jaws insure good mastication,
And on her cheek warm blushes speak a robust circulation.

I SAW thee, lovely Inez, with one good left-arm swing,
Lay out a boxing teacher 'mid the sawdust in the ring.
I saw thee biff a golf ball such a fierce, determined swing
It faded through the misty blue, and none could find the thing.

And oh, my lovely Inez, when she bursts into song,
So vibrantly her baritone rolls forth the streets along
That little urchins gather 'round her window in a throng
And cry with joy "That's Eddie Fo'y!" nor guess that they are wrong.

THEY tell of lovely Inez a stern and tragic tale
That once a masher thought that he would follow in her trail,
And people clear in Hackensack could hear him plead and wail
When, very grim, she collared him and lugged him off to jail.

Farewell, farewell, fair Inez, though great will be my loss,
Our barks will never side by side on seas of wedlock toss,
Alone that ocean blank and drear I rather choose to cross,
For something whispers in my ear that you would be the boss.

Our Jap Brother

By BERTON BRALEY

(With the Usual Apologies.)

THIS talk of our "Japanese brother"
Has rather got under my skin,
For taking one thing with another
I do not consider him kin.
I freely confess I don't love him,
However his virtues may shine.
He may be a brother of William J. Bryan,
But he ain't no brother of mine!

I think he's a fraud and a shammer
For all of his courteous ways,
And I'll just add my voice to the clamor
The ignorant populace raise."
I don't like the Japanese coolie
(I'm narrow, of course, you opine),
He may be a brother of William J. Bryan,
But he ain't no brother of mine!

But he ain't no brother of mine!
He may be all right out in Nippon,
And that's where I want him to stay.
I don't like his getting his grip on
The soil of the old U. S. A.
I don't like his ways or his morals,
His creed or his facial design.
He may be a brother of William J. Bryan,
But he ain't no brother of mine!

One Woman's Story

CHAPTER VI.

GORDON CRAIG lingered in New York a little longer than was absolutely necessary. He intended to go to Boston at the end of a week, he said, but in reality he could have left New York a little earlier than that had he been inclined to do so. He would stop again in the big city for a couple of days after his return from the East, making his present hotel his headquarters and running over to Philadelphia for some orders which he thought he might secure in the City of Brotherly Love. All this he confided to Mary Danforth when he called on her one evening soon after that on which he had dined in her home.

"I have done much better than I expected," he said in self-congratulation. "I got some more orders today, and I have called tonight to suggest that you help me 'celebrate.' Won't you go to the theatre with me some evening this week?"

Mary hesitated. "I would love to go," she acknowledged frankly, yet regretfully, "but I fear I ought not to, for I am very busy just now with my studies. I must pass my 'exams,' you know, and I have been working overtime on my stenography and typewriting. That is one of dad's fads, and he insists that I must be perfect in the only thing by which I could make a living if I had to. Then the dear man always ends this admonition by assuring me that he will see to it that I never have to earn my own living. Inconsistent I admit, but I want to humor him."

"No, but much less interesting than other studies. History, English and other things I do like would not bring me in any money, even at a pinch—but they are certainly pleasanter than learning to make cabalistic shorthand signs and to write on the machine. Yet," with sudden seriousness, "I have a feeling that I will have to depend on stenography and typewriting some day, and I must be ready

FAIR WOMAN

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

A WOMAN is easy to understand;
This is a secret second hand:

When you pat her on the cheek
With your envelope each week,
Saying "Here's the money, dear,"
As you pinch her sh el-like ear;
When she show'rs you with caresses,
Planning on new hats and dresses,
When she calls you her Greek god,
Though you know y ou have a pod,
She's happ y.

When she meets yo u at the door
In the morn at thr ee or four,
Trying with small f ists to hit you,
Threatening to pack u and quit you;
When she throws a dish or two
Clear across the roo m at you,
When she swings— and not in vain—
With your heavy w alking cane,
She's out o f sorts.

That is the secret, a econd hand.
A woman is easy to understand.
